SHALL LENNOX & ADDINGTON HAVE A HOSPITAL?

MR. W. S. DETLOR MAKES A GENEROUS OFFER.

(To The Editor.)

Our worth townsman, Mr. Wm. S. Dettlor for many years in the retail drug business, proposes to purchase the fine house and grounds, known as the Stevenson property, and donate it for a Public Hospital, if there is sufficient guarantee of maintenance.

This property is well suited for the purpose. The house was built by the late Hon. John Stevenson. Mr. Dettlor bought it and after making some improvement sold it to the late Mr. John A. Shibley, who put the premises into fine condition. Among other improvements Mr. Shibley built a good stable that could be utilized to advantage.

Mr. Dettlor will have to pay eight thousand dollars for the property, and it seems reasonable to expect a sufficient endowment will be forthcoming to guarantee its maintenance, with the Municipal and Provincial Aid.

Mr. Dettlor requests us to lay the proposition before the public.

We have interviewed, but a few citizens and almost unanimously they think the offer should be accepted.

The Province of Ontario gives 20c per day for each patient admitted. For the first ten years of the existence of a Hospital this is paid for all patients, after which time, it is paid for only those that pay not more than $4.50 per week. A county grant and grants from the other municipalities together with receipts from pay patients make up the sources of revenue, except donations.

To avoid failure of maintenance from the uncertainty of the latter Mr. Dettlor makes this proposal of gift conditional upon a sufficient endowment being raised.

All municipal bodies of the county are asked to consider the proposition. Also every person in the county is asked to take an interest. Please do not wait to be asked personally; but if you are disposed to aid in establishing an endowment fund, let it be known through the press, or by letter to Mr. W. S. Dettlor or the undersigned.

DESERONTO ROAD.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Oliver, of Calgary, who have been visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Oliver returned to their western home on Thursday 19th. inst., after spending a couple of months here.

The flag on the upper school house has been flying at half mast since the news arrived of the death of our beloved King Edward VII.

Work has commenced on the erection of the new bridge which crosses the creek just west of the Deseronto cemetery and the travelling public are obliged to go round by Mr. Ed. Randall's and so out to the main road by Mr. Thomas Thompson's house. This is quite a round about and it is to be hoped that the work will be pushed along as rapidly as possible.

The Boy's Suit.

The Double Breasted' and Norfolk Suits are easily the Most Popular of Boys' Suits.

They're roomy, comfortable and good looking.

You'll find that our Boys' Clothes are a little tastier and more durable, and please the boys better, than the boys' clothes sold by every clothing store.

Our Boys' Clothing is made by The W. K. Johnston Co. and made to stand the strain. The seams are properly sewn. The linings are guaranteed to wear, as well as the cloth. You will find our prices just a little lower than other stores—quality considered.

Prices range from $3.50 to $7.50.

Belleville, May 12th.—At to-day's meeting of the Cheese Board 1500 boxes were offered. The sales were 300 at 10 11-16 and 1200 at 10 5-8.

Kingston, May 12th.—At to-day's meeting of the Frontenac Cheese Board 505 boxes were offered for sale. 242 boxes were sold at 10 1/2c, the balance refusing to sell.

Brockville, May 12th.—There were 1,750 cheese offered for sale at the meeting of the Board this afternoon. Ten cents was the highest bid and no sales were made. The frosty nights and cold days are having a noticeable effect on the milk supply, so the farmers say, with a corresponding decrease in the output of cheese.

Minute guns will be fired on the day of the King's funeral at every point in Canada where there is a permanent force, and every available officer and man must appear on parade.

The head of King George will not appear on the coins or postage stamps of Canada before the end of the year. The likeness of Edward the Peacemaker will continue on the currency and stamps of Canada for another six months at least. In the case of the postage stamps any design may be used but it is the custom to have the monarch's head on the two-cent stamp, which is the one most in use. The department had a six-months' supply on hand, and these will be used up while dies are being prepared for the new issue of George V. stamps.

Someone has "tipped off" the proprietors of jewelry stores, managers of banks and merchants in the small towns and cities of the province to be on the lookout for a gang of safe-blowers, who are believed to be on their way to Ontario to make a tour of the smaller places. The result has been that extra police protection has been asked for by bank managers and jewelers and already several electricians have left Toronto for the small towns and cities to install electrical fire alarms in the buildings. In many of the branch banks burglar precautions are being taken in other institutions. Police throughout the Province have been ordered to be on the lookout for the gang.

YARKER.

The junior baseball club had a game with Enterprise last Saturday. Score 27 to 1 in favor of Yarker.

SHOCKING STATE OF AFFAIRS IN KALADAR DISTRICT.

Belleville, May 15—Mr. Duntion of the Children's Aid Society and Mr. Herb Wright, local agent, have returned from the north country where they wiped out two dens of iniquity and brought ten children to the shelter.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Harriet Clark Perry, widow of the late Henry Perry, of Napanee and daughter of the late William H. Clark of Clark's Mills, died at Kingston on Thursday, May 12th, 1910. Mrs. Perry lived with her sister, Mrs. Davidson Macdonald. On Wednesday, May 11th, she was taken suddenly ill and threatened with pneumonia. A nurse was secured and the best of medical care was provided, but despite everything that could be done, Mrs. Perry died on Thursday at noon.

A short service was conducted in Kingston on Friday afternoon and the remains were brought to Napanee on Saturday morning, when they were transferred to Riverside cemetery for burial.

Mrs. Perry is survived by a sister, Mrs. Davidson Macdonald, widow of the late Dr. Macdonald, who was for many years a Methodist Missionary in Japan, and a brother, Dr. William H. Clark, who resides in San Francisco, California. Her father the late William H. Clark of Clark's Mills was for many years Post Master at that place, and her mother the late Hester Ann Warner a daughter of the late Stephen Warner, who lived in the seventh concession of Ernestown. Mrs. Perry had two brothers who died some years ago, Ferdinand and Warner Clark who died in California and George Stanley Clark who died in New York.

Mrs. Perry was a member of Queen Street Methodist Church in Kingston and was a devoted christian. Her manner was quiet and she was loved by all. She and her sister were very much attached to each other and the grief of the sister is beyond expression. They have lived together for many years both in Japan and here in Canada. Mrs. Perry is mourned by a host of friends and relatives all of whom had learned to love her.

At a meeting of the National Manufacturers at New York a proposal was made for the establishment of closer trade relations with Canada. It was also suggested that it would pay the United States to contribute liberally toward the construction of proposed Canadian canals.

SHOCKING STATE OF AFFAIRS IN KALADAR DISTRICT.

Belleville, May 15—Mrs. Dunton of the Children's Aid Society and Mr. Herb Wright, local agent, have returned from the north country where they wiped out two dens of iniquity and brought ten children to the shelter. In Kaladar they cleared out a place from which they took a woman who was sent to the Mercer for fourteen months, and brought away one child. At Clayton they found a disreputable place in which were a woman, her husband and four daughters with a number of children. One of the daughters, fifteen years old, and her baby were made wards. The mother of the girl was sent to the Mercer for a year and one daughter for four months. The fourth woman was liberated, as she had left the house and returned a short time ago, having been deserted by her husband and being disposed to lead a better life. The trials were held before Mr. F. Dufoe, J. P., and Mr. R. J. Campbell, J. P., at Clinton, and several male frequenters were fined.

WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC ALLEGED AT YARKER.

According to the statement of a young man to Justice of the Peace Hunter, Kingston, there are a man and a woman engaged in the white slave traffic at Yarker, on the Bay of Quinte Railway. The young man asked to be sworn in as a constable, so that he could make arrests at the house. He claims that his sister has been held at the house against her will, for immoral purposes, and wished to be made constable so that he could rescue her from a life of shame. The case was reported to Crown Attorney Whiting, and will be investigated.

The complainant says that his sister, 20 years old, received a letter from the woman in Yarker, offering her a good position for the summer. Trusting to the woman the girl went to her house. It is alleged that girls are kept at this house and then would be taken over to the States by two women.

American Consul F. S. S. Johnston, of Kingston, is taking steps to investigate the reports concerning the existence of a white slave traffic between Yarker and American cities. He reported the matter to Washington and is waiting for instructions.

The people of Yarker deny that there is a white slave depot there, as reported to the authorities by the young Kingston man who declared that his sister was being held in a position out there under false pretences. If there is such a resort in the vicinity they are sure it is not within the village.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for addition to the Eastern Departmental Building, Ottawa," will be received at this office until 5 P. M. on Tuesday, June 14, 1910, for the construction of an addition to the Eastern Departmental Building, Ottawa.

Plans, specifications and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed form supplied and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, made payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering declines to enter into a contract when called upon to do so or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest of any tender.

By order,

NAPOLEON TESSIER,

Secretary.

The matter of smoking cannot be discussed on the same grounds with the liquor habit. Save a few fanatics, no one objects to a reasonable consumption of tobacco by those who have attained their full growth, but there is no doubt that smoking in public places has approached the point where it is not only a nuisance but may even become a menace to health. One has only to stand upon the street and count the number of men who pass with cigars, pipes, or cigarettes, blowing into the air clouds of smoke containing who knows how many million bacteria, spitting on the pavements, or throwing butt ends of cigars into the gutter with the same possibilities of spreading disease, to realize the truth of this assertion. Tobacco smoke is constantly puffed in the faces of men, women and children to whom it is most offensive.

There is no one quite so selfish as a man addicted to tobacco. As a writer in the Outlook recently said, the man who smokes a cigar detests one who smokes a cigarette or a pipe, and the others return the feeling. They do not seem to realize that the person who does not smoke at all has good reason for hating all their tribe. The person and garments of a smoker are redolent of tobacco, and this odor, offensive to so many, is sometimes so pungent as to be distinguished at a considerable distance, sickening those who have to endure it.

Reform in this matter will not come until every man realizes that it is impolite to smoke in the presence of nontobacco users without asking permission; that it is bad manners, to say the least, to pass through crowded streets puffing smoke in others' faces; that a restaurant or an office much frequented by the public is no place to smoke at all; in short, that he should not indulge in a habit which will put any other person to inconvenience or discomfort. It is a question of good taste, of consideration for the feelings of others, of chivalry, if you will, and gentlemanly instincts.

Great Britain is becoming an extremely sober nation, and that, too, without any political agitation. Last year in the United Kingdom the expenditure for spirituous liquors was $25,000,000 less than in 1908. This is a tremendous sum to be saved from waste, for it was undoubtedly saved, or, at least, spent for better things than drink. This reform is not confined to any class. From the statistics it is seen that not only was the wine, whisky and brandy bill cut, but the beer and ale bill, too, was reduced.

THE LIVERY AND THE LIFE

Better to be an Outcast From the Father Than to Buy His Favor by Pretence

"The law is within my heart."—Psalms xi. 8.

There is a type of creed which best can be described as the overall religion. Its adherents speak of it poetically as a robe of righteousness. To them religion is simply a garment which is thrown over and hides all the rags and tatters of the real character, and faith is a process of covering up reality and substituting appearance of holiness.

For those who do not think far it doubtless is a comfortable theory that by simple acceptance of the terms offered you can be invested with a reputation which you do not possess, that no matter how bad you actually may be the infinite Judge of all is quite willing to see you as theoretically good.

When a man is too lazy to make the fight for character, too deep in the lusts of life to face the beasts within and down them, he takes his pleasures in scoffing at efforts to be decent, he calls them 'leadly morality, and points proudly to his theological overalls, telling us that it matters not at all what he really is so long as he has on this garment.

That is essentially the creed of hypocrisy; that makes all religion a pretence. Any credit for character which is based on a legal fiction or on some sort of bargaining, the purchase of an outer garment to hide real facts, and substitution of a theoretical goodness for goodness in life, makes against goodness and encourages

PRETENSE AND SHAM.

No matter what our ancient theologians may have said, no standards can be right in religion which are wrong in ordinary morals, no terms of living can be worthy in religion which are counted unworthy ethically among men. One of the great needs of popular religious thinking is to bring its demands on the life at least up to the standards of character current among men everywhere in civilization.

A deadly paralysis settles on the moral nerves when you are willing to be known for the merits of another person, when you come to believe that in the eternal test of things you will be judged not by what you really are but by a name or an external appearance won by perfunctory agreement to certain theories.

When the prodigal son came home the father loved him not because he had the best robe placed on him, but he placed the robe on him because he loved him: He was his son before the robe was donned as well as after. He esteemed him not for the robe but for the relationship. The Father of us all is not fooled by our flimsy vestments of creeds; he is our Father, whatever our philosophical clothes or actual condition.

Men become fit for the kingdom of higher living not by donning some theological uniform which hides their rags and sores but by turning their faces toward the better life, by seeking the ways of that kingdom, by growing into the glory of its fellowship and tasting the keen delights of its service. Loyalty is of the heart.

NOT OF THE UNIFORM.

But men have foolishly thought that God loved them for what they believed, instead of realizing that that great love is ours because we are his, based on existing relationships and not on any legal conditions. That great heart would love us all back to the glory of the family likeness.

What a man needs in his religion is not a garment to cover up what he really is, but a great passion, a mighty power of love and hope within him to work out and change him into what he might be. Heavenly likeness is not by conformity in clothes—even of creedal cut or theological tailoring—but by transformation of character.

In that great assize which goes on through all the ages, as the light of eternity sweeps in on us all fictions are swept away, the goats are separated even though they wear fleeces, and men are denounced even though they speak their shibboleth of name and dogma. The inadequacy and evil of any livery then appears and we realize the justness of the demands written on all our hearts, the demands for the right life, the life that seeks to love the good and true and serve the needy and make real the ideal.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON. MAY 22.

The Death of John the Baptist,
Matt. 14. 1-12. Golden Text,
Prov. 16. 32.

Verse 1. Herod the tetrarch—Originally, a tetrarch was the ruler of the fourth part of a country. From the time of Pompey the Great the title was given to any implacable foe, Herodias, whose marriage he had so fearlessly denounced. Had it not been for her, it seems likely John would have been freed, for the heart of Herod had been stirred by his interviews with the Baptist (Mark 6. 20). But now was this conscienceless woman's chance. "As if it were some viand she is speaking, of just so doth she ask for that sacred and blessed head to be brought in in a charger" (Chrysostom). The platter was a flat tray, usually of brass, laid upon a low stool upon which rested the dishes, and around it the guests reclined. "When she requested that the head of John might be served up to her on one of the HOME.

HELPS FOR THE MOTHER.

Do not cut out baby garments without patterns, as these may be had for everything the modern baby wears. It pays to buy one. If copying from another baby's frock cut first in cheap material.

With constant changes in baby garments keep up to date. The good pattern for baby has comfort for its first consideration. The little clothes should be hygienic in shape, material and lightness.

A dainty barrier coat is made from straight strips of flannel for the waist, with straps over the shoulders to keep it on, and one end longer and pointed to lap around the back. Gored breadths of flannel are sewed to this waist with little fullness. These open up the front and the finished with a four inch hem at bottom. Lines of briar stitching mark the edge of facing on each side of front and outline the hem. It also trims the waist a half inch in from edge.

A barrier coat is made longer than an ordinary flannel petticoat so that the ends can be turned up to protect baby's feet. Safety pins are used for this purpose, or double button-holes are put through the hems and buttons in corresponding places on front of skirt.

Embroidered flannel petticoats are made in two ways; either with the entire garment cut of the material, the neck and sleeves being finished with a tiny embroidered scallop, or it is fastened to a plain muslin waist with only the bottom of skirt embroidered. The length is just a trifle shorter than the white petticoat and frock.

Wrappers are made both with and without yokes. The latter is the favorite, cut to fit smoothly over the shoulders and fall in straight not too full breadths to the bottom of slip. The kimono wrapper is much used, but is not so warm as a pattern with sleeves. There is usually a small turn down collar and turn back cuffs. Sometimes a wrapper has a light hood that can be pulled over baby's head in a draughty room.

The embroidery on a wrapper may be as simple or as elaborate as one wishes provided the general effect is delicate. Briarstitching down each side, across the bottom of skirt, and on cuffs and collar is always in good taste. Or the edge can be buttonholed around the entire wrapper either in white or color. Sometimes the buttonholed edge has a briarstitched vine about a half inch from the points of scallops, or more stylish yet is a small dotted border, worked in satin stitch in the same color as scallop.

BREADS.

Three Hour Bread.—Bread in three hours (yeast)—Boil eight large potatoes and mash in water in which they were boiled. While this is still boiling pour over four tablespoonfuls of flour. To this add four tablespoonfuls of salt and granulated sugar, one quart of boiling and four quarts of cold water and two yeast cakes, dissolved in half a cupful of lukewarm water. Mix well and keep standing in a warm place for three hours. Then cut spent for better things than drink. This reform is not confined to any class. From the statistics it is seen that not only was the wine, whisky and brandy bill cut, but the beer and ale as well. In clubs and mansions, in mess halls, tenements, and "pubs," there has been a marked falling off in the drink consumption. The old "B. and S." and its successor, whisky and soda, have almost entirely gone out, and wines, save at banquets, are sparingly used, and even at public feasts men in larger numbers are turning down their glasses.

Among the poor there is still a deal of beer and ale consumed, but oftener with meals than as a social beverage. The police records show a notable falling off of arrests for drunkenness and a decrease in crimes laid to drink. In the place of strong drink they now consume tea—which "inebrates" not, but only cheers. Even in regimental mess-rooms the steaming cup of Bohemian has supplanted beer and more ardent tipples. Excessive tea drinking may in years affect the nerves, but it will never wreck homes.

ANIMALS

The huano of Santa Cruz digs its own grave.

The coconut crab climbs coconut trees and cuts off the ripe nuts with its claws.

Snakes, for their size, weigh very little. A twenty-foot python weighs about twelve pounds, and the green and deadly tiger snake of Australia will, when six feet long, tip the beam at only two pounds. A half pound is more than the average rattlesnake's weight.

The swimming perch of India travels from pool to pool, and in cross country "tramps" ascends trees to moisten its gills with the water collected in the hollows of the bark.

The tiger's voice has a tone so reverberating that it seems to come from all sides at once. The tiger, when stalking the deer, utters his dreadful cry and the deer halts and stands motionless, trying to locate the sound. It is then that the tiger, approaching noiselessly, leaps on its victim.

Certain species of crabs pluck and plant on their shells seaweed or bits of sponge, which, growing, afford excellent concealment. This crab is amusing in an aquarium. Very anxious without its usual covering, it seizes bits of paper or food and tries to fix them on its back. One such captive had a little egg put made for him, which he put on in a hurry as soon as it was lowered down into the water.

LET HER DOWN EASY

Young Husband—Did you make those biscuits, my dear?

His Wife—Yes, darling.

Her Husband—Well, I'd rather you would not make any more, sweetie.

His Wife—Why not, my love?

Her Husband—Because, angel mine, you are too light for such heavy work.

Prov. 16. 32.

Verse 1. Herod the tetrarch—Originally, a tetrarch was the ruler of the fourth part of a country. From the time of Pompey the Great the title was given to any dependent prince who, while subordinate to kings, still enjoyed many of the prerogatives of a sovereign. This Herod (Antipas) had received the government of Galilee and Peraea from his father.

Report concerning Jesus—For over a year Jesus had been preaching and healing in Galilee. Tiberias, the capital of Herod, stood on the shore of the sea of Galilee within ten miles of Capernaum, and it would have been strange if some rumor of the excitement of the multitude had not reached his ears.

2. Said, . . . This is John the Baptist—Popular opinion (Luke 9: 7-9) was divided. Some said this wonder-worker was Elijah, others that it was one of the prophets of old returned, still others that it was John risen from the dead. The last theory Herod readily adopted, because his conscience troubled him. In spite of his views as a Sadducee (compare Matt. 16: 6 with Mark 8: 15), and his consequent denial of the resurrection, his crime filled him with a haunting dread.

3. 12. These verses must be regarded as a kind of parenthesis, inasmuch as verse 13 of the chapter takes up the statements made in verses 1 and 2. When Jesus heard of the suspicious of Herod concerning himself, then he made his retreat across the Lake.

4. Herodias—See Word Studies for April 17. Philip the half-brother of Herod was a private citizen in Rome, and his wife, Herodias, was lured away by Antipas while the latter was visiting the imperial city. Their marriage was not lawful, inasmuch as she was his own niece and wife of his living brother (Lev. 18: 16).

5. Feared the multitude—Josephus declares that the arrest of John was for political reasons. Herod, fearing a rebellion would be raised under the leadership of this popular idol. Acting upon this first impulse, the tetrarch would gladly have killed John, but he dreaded the insurrection that might follow, because the crowd regarded the Baptist as a prophet.

6. When Herod's birthday came—The observance of birthdays was a Greek custom, considered idolatrous by the Hebrews, introduced by the Herods. The birthdays of kings were widely celebrated in ancient times.

The daughter of Herodias—Salome was her name. Her dancing, which so greatly pleased her uncle, Herod, was according to an ancient custom of the Greeks. Professional dancers were employed to go through performances of a licentious character. For a woman of rank to stoop to such a low act before a company of drunken revellers was a shameful outrage.

7. Whatsoever she should ask—Mark adds "even to the half of my kingdom." It was a stupid promise, made after the Oriental fashion, and sealed by an oath, and took no account of the fact that he could not, without the sanction of Rome, dispose of a foot of ground in his domain.

8. Put forward by her mother—The real reason for John's plight was, of course, the bitterness of his charge" (Chrysostom). The platter was a flat tray, usually of brass, laid upon a low stool upon which rested the dishes, and around it the guests reclined. "When she requested that the head of John might be served up to her on one of the trays from which the guests were being regaled, the unfeeling jest implied that this would be to her both her professional fee and her portion of the feast."

9. The king—So he was called in popular parlance.

Was grieved—The indulgence he had shown John during his imprisonment, and the pleasure with which he heard the Baptist speak, show that he had formed a high estimate of the prophet.

For the sake of his oaths—Compare the story of Jephthah, Judg. 11: 31. To have withdrawn from his promise would have been a violation of the crude code of honor of that day, and besides he was eager to gratify the blood-thirsty passion of his fellow-revelers.

10. Beheaded John in the prison—The banquet must, accordingly, have been held at the fortress palace of Machaerus. Mark's account of the tragic end of the Baptist is most vivid (Mark 6: 21-29).

11. She brought it to her mother—The cold-blooded precision with which these women wrought their vengeance is almost inconceivable. But swift retribution was visited upon Antipas and Herodias. They went to Rome to seek from the emperor the title of king, and were rewarded by being banished to Lugdunum in Gaul. Herodias voluntarily sharing Herod's exile.

12. His disciples . . . buried him, and . . . told Jesus—This loving and faithful devotion to their leader helps us to understand the fact that twenty years later, in far away Ephesus, Paul found disciples, including Apollos, who knew no other baptism than that of John.

SHARK FIN TRADE.

Singapore Supplies Local 200,000 Chinese with Delicacy.

Singapore has an important shark fin trade which supplies the local 200,000 Chinese with this Oriental delicacy. The $157,753 worth imported in 1905 came from Borneo, Penang, Sarawak, Malacca, Ceylon, Celebes and the Coromandel coast. Over one-half of this amount was re-exported to China.

The Malay shark, called the "ikan ya," is the most dreaded by the natives. During the terrible disaster of the French steamer La Scyne from its collision with the British ship Onda in the Straits of Malacca last November many of the ninety passengers lost were as soon as they reached the waters of the straits seized by the sharks and dragged beneath the surface to be devoured by those fierce Malayan fish, which are especially feared by the native fishers and pearl drivers.

Seventeen species inhabit the far eastern seas, some of them attaining a length of twenty-five feet. It is reported that a black fin shark was captured some time since whose liver weighed 250 pounds. The largest is the backing shark, which ranges from the Cape of Good Hope to Ceylon, and often exceeds fifty feet in length. This fish has small teeth and is not considered as dangerous as the monsters of the Malayan Archipelago.

spoonfuls of hour. To this add four tablespoonsful of salt and granulated sugar, one quart of boiling and four quarts of cold water and two yeast cakes, dissolved in half a cupful of lukewarm water. Mix well, and keep standing in a warm place eighteen hours. Then put in a cool place and keep until required. The bread—Use one quart of the yeast for two good-sized loaves. Set on stove and stir with the hand until about ninety-eight degrees Fahrenheit. Add a tablespoonful each of salt, brown sugar and butter; mix into a soft sponge with warmed flour. Let it rise thirty minutes. Add flour to knead, let rise again, mold into loaves, let rise and bake in a moderate oven.

Oatmeal Bread.—Take two cupfuls of sponge. Into two cupfuls of oatmeal pour one cupful of boiling water. Let stand until blood warm, then turn the sponge over it, add one tablespoonful of lard, one-half cupful of molasses, one teaspoonful of salt, one cupful of raisins, and one-half cupful of nut meats. Mix stiff with white flour and treat the same as white bread.

Corn Bread.—One and one-fourth cupfuls flour, three-fourths cupful of oatmeal, one-fourth cupful sugar, generous lump butter, one egg, one cupful sweet milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Cream butter, and sugar; add egg, milk, and flour; beat well, then put in pan and bake.

Nut Bread.—Four cupfuls of flour, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful salt, three-fourths cupful sugar, two cupfuls milk, one cupful assorted chopped nuts. Raisins or date may be added. Mix all together and put into buttered bread pans; let stand to raise twenty minutes; bake forty-five minutes. Same will make two medium sized loaves.

Health Bread.—A new health bread that is strictly hygienic and palatable: Seven cupfuls of whole wheat flour, two cupfuls of crushed wheat, one-half cupful of molasses, salt to taste, three and one-half cupfuls of lukewarm water, three-fourths of a cake of compressed yeast dissolved in the half cupful of water. Mix all together and let rise over night. In morning knead down and let rise again, then form into loaves and when raised bake an hour and a quarter in a rather slow oven.

MOTHERS AND CHILDREN

Before cutting baby's nails, soak the finger tips in a warm lather to which a little olive oil has been added.

Sore eyes should not be tolerated. Procure half an ounce of the best castor oil, and smear a little along the lids when retiring for the night.

The eyelashes should never be clipped after babyhood, but some mothers cut their infants' lashes in order to make them grow thick and long.

Never press a child to eat fat. Many children have a constitutional loathing of this form of food. This distaste is given them by Nature, as they cannot digest it.

Don't forget, mothers, how important it is that the children should have proper meals at regular hours. Insufficient or unsuitable food will soon break down the little one's health during the long school hours.

Children's hands are often disfigured by warts, and they can be cured in a simple way. Get kerosene and sweet oil of equal mixture and paint the warts with this each day. It is slow, yet thoroughly satisfactory.

If a child squints it should be taken to an oculist as soon as it is old enough, as a specialist will be able to at once state if an operation will be of benefit or not. This operation is usually performed when the child is about eight.

If possible, every child should have a bed to itself, and the sleeping-room should contain nothing more than the necessary furniture, and very little drapery. The bed should be placed in such a position that the light from the window does not fall directly on the eyes.

Encourage children to eat liberally of vegetables, such as potatoes, beans, tomatoes, onions, and lettuce. Most vegetables are good, and if regularly taken there will seldom be any need for an aperient medicine, as the acids in the vegetables are a great aid to digestion.

Once let a child see that it can get the mastery over its parents, and good-bye to peace in the home and happiness in the future. A girl or boy of twelve will not require whipping, if care has been taken to weed out little habits of selfishness or of temper. We cannot expect our children to be faultless—their very failings endear them to us—but the childish errors and fits of petulance may be curbed at a very early age.

Many mothers are at a loss how to provide a substitute for braces for baby boys on first putting them into knickers. Make a bodice of white flannelette, sew on six pieces of white elastic one inch wide and two inches long, with a button-hole worked at the end of each to come in line with the buttons on the knickers. This will be found very comfortable, and comply with the movements of the body without having the little shoulders drawn down with uncomfortable braces.

NEW IDEAS FOR RHUBARB.

Danish Jelly.—Cut into inch lengths one bunch of rhubarb, place in a baking pan. Sprinkle over one cupful of sugar, add one-half cupful of boiling water. Cook until a syrup forms. Now stir in lightly one-half cupful of bread crumbs to absorb the syrup. Turn into a mold. When cold unmold on a plate and garnish with whipped cream.

Rhubarb and Cherry Jam.—Cut into small pieces two bunches of rhubarb, mix with three cupfuls of granulated sugar and one cupful of cherry juice. Place in a shallow earthenware vessel in moderately hot oven. Let simmer slowly for about thirty minutes. Scald jelly glasses and turn the marmalade into them. This is very delicious, tasting like cherries, having the true cherry tang.

MEATS.

Creamed Hamburg Steak.—Put one pound of hamburger steak in a frying pan with one medium size onion cut fine, cover with one-half cupful of water, salt and pepper to taste, and let cook until water is boiled away. Add butter size of an egg and brown. Sprinkle one tablespoonful of flour over this and add one cup of milk, and stir until smooth. If served on square slices of toasted bread will make a

THE SUBJUGATION OF BERT

"And so," finished Mr. Hopkins hurriedly, "I can't marry you!"

It had come at last! Sarah turned on the narrow seat, and eyed her companion slowly. Hopkins kept his head turned obstinately towards the bandstand. To prove his utter lack of nervousness, he even began to whistle.

Miss Bryce drew a long, quavering breath. Then her firm chin tightened.

"What are you talking about, Mr. Hopkins!" she repeated, for the second time.

"I was only explainin' things," said Mr. Hopkins vaguely.

"But why?" Hopkins waved his hand.

"Well, you see," he began.

"That's just what I don't do," interrupted Sarah coldly. That her hands were clasped tightly together beneath her large muff, that a foolish moisture was glistening in the corner of each dark eye were things of which Hopkins had no notion.

He turned and stared at the girl. "You don't understand?" he repeated.

"No!"

The Life Guards' band was still rattling off the quick, breezy notes of "Down South," but Mr. Hopkins could have sworn that a death-like hush had fallen on Hyde Park at that very moment.

Being an unfinished cavalier he went straight to the point at once.

"Ain't we been walkin' out together?" he demanded.

Gallant Sarah laughed.

"You have been kind enough to take me out once or twice," she murmured.

While he was mentally reeling under this severe shock to his egotism, Sarah planted another shrewd blow.

"And helped me eat supper," she added.

Mr. Hopkins tugged at his collar, a habit he had when angry.

"If you're tryin' to hinsiuate as 'ow I took up with you jist for a measly supper—" he cried.

"Measly, indeed! Cold beef, pickles, beer, and a hot sweet—plenty of them, too—isn't my idea of a bad supper. Nor yours either, Mr. Hopkins, if your usual appetite goes for anything."

The flirtatious young man began to boil. Events were not happening as he had expected. He had anticipated an outburst of grief, or even indignant protest.

He had expected faint murmurings of love and broken-hearted recriminations, and the girl had simply asked him what was he talking about.

"Of course, if you are going to take it sensible like all the better," he said presently, in a very dissatisfied voice.

"If I weren't sure that you're a very steady sort of young fellow, Mr. Hopkins," Sarah said, with an exasperatingly friendly inflection, "I should say that you'd been drinking. What is it that I'm taking 'sensible like'?" Hopkins swallowed viciously for that stage of self-pity which borders on tears.

But Sarah put her finger at once on the weak point in his argument.

"It's been bunkum on both sides, hasn't it?" she murmured. "You knew that you couldn't marry me. You had your mother to feed, your home to keep, your way to make in the world." She repeated each of his little stock phrases with telling emphasis. "So we've both been having a game."

Mr. Hopkins opened his mouth. He was about to pour forth an entire withdrawal of his statements. Sarah felt it coming, and looked round for a way of escape.

Providence and a fine evening sent the footman of the house she worked in up to the gates at that very instant.

"Oh, there he is!" she cried, dropping Mr. Hopkins' arm. "I must be going! Good-bye!"

"But, ere! I— Well, I'm blowed!" gasped the discarded gazing after the slim figure as it hurried after the strange man.

He had been chucked! Cast aside like an old glove, discarded in the off-hand fashion which he had found so delightful, when playing the part of discards.

"The—the bally FLIRT!" he cried.

Then suddenly, and with overwhelming force, a new and painful spirit entered his breast. That strange man?

Who was he? What right had he to entice his girl away from his side? They had turned back through the Park again. They might even be seated together, listening to the band.

Mr. Hopkins spat solemnly on his wide palms, gripped his thin stick tightly, and dashed into the leafy avenue again.

"I'll knock 'is bloomin' head off!" he thought. "The flat-footed lafer!"

But Sarah and the stranger were not to be found, and so, at ten o'clock, a very weary, very heart-sick young man crawled on to a 'bus bound for Putney.

When he came down to breakfast next morning he had made up his mind definitely. His was a blasted life!

He sighed as he laced his boots, groaned as he drew the chair up to the table.

His mother, bustling about in the scullery, seemed to have developed a most exasperating attack of deafness.

Mr. Hopkins felt that he would have to pour his sorrows out into some sympathetic ear or die! Yes, when his mother placed the plate of bacon and eggs in front of him, and he let off a sigh loud enough to be heard in the next street, she simply turned, and hurried back for the teapot without a word!

Her son glared after her angrily. "She don't care wot happens to me!" he thought wretchedly. "I wish I was dead!"

His appetite, however, had no such desires, and mechanically he picked up his knife and fork and set to work. The arrival of the teapot gave him another opportunity. He resolved not to trust to sighs this time.

"I—I don't think I want tea, ma," he said. "I'm too much upset about—about something."

Had he looked up at that moment he might have caught the twinkle of unholo delight which glistened in the old eyes above him.

HEALTH

STOMACH AND NERVES.

There is no one living who has not been compelled with more or less frequency to learn by actual experience what it meant by indigestion, the lessons varying from the occasional acute attack, traceable to some unmistakable indiscretion, to the condition of semi-invalidism in which many persons languish, solely by reason of the uncertain action of the digestive processes.

In most cases of indigestion, or dyspepsia, the stomach or the intestines are at fault; but this is by no means always so, and great injustice is done by a failure to recognize that the stomach is not the real culprit, but is only put forward by the rest of the system, as it were, as a spokesman. It faithfully performs its office of lodging a complaint for the general economy, and it is then immediately doted and redosed, with disappointing results, because the real trouble has not been recognized or attacked.

Every one has heard that it is best not to eat when extremely fatigued, but this is not because the stomach itself is tired, but because the entire system is temporarily too enfeebled to send out sufficient blood supply to cope with the increased work that digestion entails. The stomach, in order to do its work properly, must be fed with the nervous force that comes from good circulation, and this is impossible if the brain is calling for more than its share. This, again, is the reason why brain-workers should not go straight from their work to a heavy meal, but should take a walk or some simple gymnastic exercises first, in order to draw the blood from the oversupplied brain down to the stomach, the turn of which to work has come.

The same reason should forbid immediate hard work of any kind after a meal. Let the stomach have its fair turn.

Much indigestion may be classed as purely nervous in its origin. If the whole nervous system is out of order and on strike, it would be strange if the nerves of the stomach should escape the general calamity. In this type, constant doses of medicine for "stomach trouble" will do little good, but judicious rest and general toning up of the whole nervous system may work a miracle.

That most wretched of all the briefer illnesses known as a "sick-headache," in which, as the name implies, the stomach is a cosufferer with the head, is much more apt to be caused by irritated brain centers than by abuse of the digestive organs, as is proved by the frequency with which an attack is brought on by overuse of the eyes, or any continued strain or excitement.—Youth's Companion.

cupful of water, salt and pepper to taste, and let cook until water is boiled away. Add butter size of an egg and brown. Sprinkle one table spoonful of flour over this and add one cup of milk, and stir until smooth. If served on square slices of toasted bread will make a delicious breakfast dish.

Kidney Stew.—Soak kidneys in salt water three hours. Then cut in small pieces, discarding core, put on fire in cold water for fifteen minutes, drain and return to fire with one large table spoonful of dripping. Add two medium sized onions, one carrot, one-half can of tomatoes. Let cook for at least one and one-half or two hours. Do not add any water until ready to serve, then only sufficient to make a good gravy with a little flour added.

SNAKES IN AFRICA.

Natives Have Many Superstitions Connected With Them.

The African cobra is regarded somewhat reverently by the natives of that country, who once a year kill a cobra de capello and hang its skin to the branch of a tree, tail downward. Then all the children born during the last year are brought out and made to touch the skin. This, the parents think, puts them under the serpent's protection. The cobra de capello divides with the horned viper of Africa the questionable honor of being the "worm of the Nile," to whose venomous tooth Cleopatra's death was due. The Kaffirs use the venom of this snake's cousin, the puff adder, to poison their arrows, and when they have any small quantity left they swallow it, having a theory that it will protect them from the bad effects of future bites. The Snake tribe of the Punjab say that the bites of snakes do not hurt them, and if they find a dead serpent they dress it in clothes and give it a superb funeral.

THE SIN OF SHAVING.

One of the severest sects of Old Believers in Russia has issued a manifesto directed against the "noxious evil" of shaving and cutting the beard. This heretical custom has, it is stated, been spreading among Old Believers during the last thirty years. Shorn men and men with clipped beards come to church, kiss the holy cross and the holy icons, and are apparently unconscious that they are living in a state of habitual deadly sin. To make them realize the abominable nature of their criminal vanity it is now ordered that if a shorn man wishes to be married he is to be told that the church will not provide a grand wedding with singing and ceremonies unless he repents.

HIRING HELP.

"What salary do you want?"
"Oh, fifty a week."
"I judge I'd better frame my question differently. What salary do you expect?"

The worst infidelity is that faith which holds that the universe is so much of a lie that you can fool it with a hypocrite's life.

Much of our good would be a great deal better if we made less fuss about it.

very steady sort of young fellow, Mr. Hopkins," Sarah said, with an exasperatingly friendly inflection, "I should say that you'd been drinking. What is it that I'm taking sensible like?"

Hopkins swallowed viciously for a few moments.

"I—I thought you—you thought we was walking out," he remarked.

Sarah, fighting for her love, blessed the darkness that hid her white cheeks.

"Did you?"
"Yes, I did! And, not wishing to make a fool of you, I thought it best to explain just 'ow things stood," flashed the infuriated Hopkins.

"Dear—dear! Well, I think that that was very thoughtful of you, Mr. Hopkins, I do, indeed."

How was it that her level tones reminded Hopkins of the supercilious accents of the foreman at his factory when he—Hopkins—ventured to suggest improvements?

"But, unfortunately, you needn't have troubled. You didn't make a fool of me, as it happened."

"You knew that there was nothing in it?"

"Oh dear, yes!"

Mr. Hopkins paused for a moment. Deep down in his heart there lurked a suspicion that Sarah was only playing with him; that in her soul she held more than a mere liking for him. He tried another attack. Desperately now, for he was fighting for his own self-conceit.

"And—and all the kisses," he muttered.

"You—you beast!" thought Sarah.

Then aloud she said:

"I had to encourage you, you know!"

That settled it. Mr. Hopkins veered round, like the human weathercock he was. He forgot that he had made up his mind to end matters that evening, forgot that he had looked forward to a repetition of old scenes with other fond and foolish sweethearts. From playing the stock part of betrayer he took up the role of betrayed.

"You—you deceiver!" he cried, loud enough for the people on the next seat to hear and turn to stare at the couple.

With the palm of victory in her grasp, Sarah arose, triumphant and regal.

"I am going now, Mr. Hopkins," she said quietly. "Good-night!"

Hopkins rammed his hat firmly on his forehead and leaped to her side.

"I'm hanged if you're going to leave me without—without an explanation of your conduct!" he said.

"To think of it!" he muttered, as they reached the Park gates. "I've wasted eight months on you, and you was only havin' a game with me!"

"I never asked you to come."

Her companion conveniently dodged this aside.

"Every Wednesday I've tramped down to see you; waited outside until you was ready to come out, and took you to theatres and music-halls w'en I could afford it."

"I always said you were very kind."

"And it's been all hookem—mere bunkum on your part! You never cared a rap for me!"

The tremor in Mr. Hopkins' voice proved that he was rapidly reaching

"I—I don't think I want tea, ma," he said. "I'm too much upset about—about something."

Had he looked up at that moment he might have caught the twinkle of unholy delight which glinted in the old eyes above him.

"That's all right, Bert," his mother said briskly. "A cup of tea will do you good."

She poured out the fragrant brew and whisked off into the scullery again. That she made a dash for the roller-towel, and stuffed a corner of it into her mouth, her whole frame fairly shaking with suppressed laughter, would have astonished her son had he known. As it was, her callous manner stunned him.

"Anyone can see that I'm miserable," he muttered. "Yet she tells me I'm all right. Never knew 'er to be so hard-hearted before. Oh, Sarah—Sarah!"

He finished his meal, got up from the table, took his hat from the peg behind the door. His mother came out from the scullery.

"Good-morning, Bert!" she said.

Bert stalked out of the house. Mrs. Hopkins, free to enjoy her mirth at last, collapsed into the chair vacated by her son.

"Oh, dearie me—dearie me! I thought I should have died! Ha, ha, ha!"

Presently she sat up, wiping her eyes.

"I must go and hear what happened," she decided, "or I'll never do a stroke of work!"

By ten o'clock she was seated in the big kitchen of the house in Bayswater, listening to a lively account of the previous night's happenings. The footman—a married man with three children—came in for a fair share of the general applause.

"It was very kind of you, I'm sure," Mrs. Hopkins said.

"Don't mention it, mum!" said the man genially. "I hadn't I was rather taken aback when Sarah came rushing up to me, but, bless your 'eart, I soon got over it."

When the two women were alone together again, Sarah voiced the doubt which had crept into her heart.

"You—you are sure he'll forgive me?"

Mrs. Hopkins smiled.

"Forgive you?" she repeated. "If you'd seen his face this morning you wouldn't need to ask that question." She leaned forward suddenly and kissed the radiantly happy girl in front of her.

"You and I have cured him, my dear," she finished. "I didn't think much of the other girls, but when I saw you I made up my mind that Bert would just have to have you. That's why I told you the truth about him. I don't need to ask a ha'penny from him. The house is mine and his poor father left me enough to keep me comfortable."

She opened her arms, and Sarah was enveloped in a warm, motherly hug.—London Answers.

TALK TO NERVOUS WOMEN.

Women are more often afflicted with nerves than men. They have not, as a rule, so many outlets for their energy, and the worry and strain of home and children, with very little change and amusement, in many cases is most wearing.

The time to cure "nerves" is at the very beginning. If you find yourself getting into a way of feeling "blue" frequently, without any real reason, pull yourself up. Stop and ask yourself what it really is you are worrying about, and you will very possibly find that you are converting a molehill into a mountain.

Or, perhaps you are not taking sufficient food. Many women do not at all realize that in order to keep themselves up to the mark meals must be nourishing and regular. But if you find that you do not easily digest heavy meals, don't eat them. Many women, more especially as they get on in years, would be far better than they are if they took meat once a day only, substituting an egg for breakfast and some vegetable dish for either lunch or supper.

If at any time you find yourself getting "nervy," try, if possible, what a few days' change of air and surroundings will do. It often works wonders. The following are a few good rules to follow:—

Live and sleep in rooms with open windows.

Be out in the open air as much as possible, even if it means giving less time to the house.

Try and take ten minutes in a really comfortable chair, with your eyes shut, in the middle of the day.

If during the day you feel inclined to weep without any real reason, start doing something that will occupy all your energies.

ICE AS FUEL.

A cake of ice at 32 degrees Fahrenheit is ordinarily considered to be rather a cold substance, but it is as much hotter than liquid air as the oven in which bread is baked is hotter than the ice. A teakettle partly filled with liquid air and placed on a cake of ice receives so much heat from the ice that the liquid air soon boils vigorously, and the boiling can be made more violent by adding a few lumps of ice. If the normal temperature of the earth were at the freezing point of air and we could obtain a block of ice such as is distributed by the ice-man of to-day such ice could be used as fuel and would be put into the furnaces instead of coal.

HADN'T SUNK SO LOW.

Hobo—"Ma'am, I'm hungry. I'll do anythin' fer some food."

Housewife—"Poor man! I won't make you work. Here's a fine hot breakfast—just wash your hands."

NERVOUS DISEASES IN THE SPRING

Can Only be Removed by Toning
Up the Blood and Strengthening the Nerves.

Nervous diseases become more common and more serious in the spring than at any other time of the year. This is the opinion of the best medical authorities after long observation. Vital changes in the system after long winter months may cause much more than "spring weakness," and the familiar weariness and aching. Official records prove that in April and May neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy and various forms of nervous disturbances are at their worst, especially among those who have not reached middle age.

The antiquated custom of taking purgatives in the spring is useless, for the system really needs strengthening—purgatives make you weaker. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have a special action on the blood and nerves, for they give strength and have cured not only many forms of nervous disorders, but also other spring troubles such as headaches, weakness in the limbs, loss of appetite, trembling of the hands, melancholy and mental and bodily weariness as well as unsightly pimples and skin troubles.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure these nervous disorders and spring ailments because they actually make new, rich, red blood. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CREMATIONS IN ENGLAND.

There Were 855 Last Year—Number Steadily Increasing.

The movement in favor of cremation in England continues to make slow but steady progress, writes the London correspondent of the New York Medical Journal. During 1909 the number of cremations carried out in Great Britain was 855, an advance of sixty as compared with 1908.

The first crematorium in England was opened at Woking in 1885 and the total number of cremations since that time is 8,121. There are now altogether thirteen crematoria in Great Britain and this number will probably soon be increased. The Cremation Society of England has been very active in its propaganda work and public interest is slowly being aroused.

Recently a cremation society was formed in Edinburgh. The object of the society is to promote the practice of cremation and burial reform by means of meetings, lectures and publications or otherwise. There are already about 180 members, including many well known persons.

THE MYSTERY CLEARED UP;

OR, THE HERITAGE OF MADAME YALTA.

CHAPTER VI.

Maxime had not lost sight of his prey. He had followed the two foreigners, and was holding himself in ambush in the first turn in the corridor.

He had sworn not to leave the place until the brunette left her box, and to keep close in her footsteps so soon as she appeared. Further than that his plan was unsettled. Whether he should approach her as soon as she left the theatre, or follow her unobserved, he had not yet determined. The great point was not to lose sight of her, and to find out where she lived.

As for Borisoff and his companion, satisfied that they had left not to return, he thought no more of them, and was not a little surprised to see them reappear after an absence of a few minutes, and direct their steps toward the box where Madame Sergent still remained. Already he had ascertained that the box-keeper had brought her a superb fur pelisse and hood trimmed with swan's down, which recalled unpleasant recollections. Evidently she had begun her preparations for departure, and might be expected to leave the box every moment. But Maxime had not anticipated that her two cavaliers would return to seek her. The door was opened, and the lady all wrapped up appeared on the threshold and took the direction of the stairway, escorted on each side by two personages whom Maxime was sending to all the devils.

"They are accompanying her," he said, between his teeth; "this is the climax. Where are they going? To supper, perhaps, but no—there is a mystery in the reunion of these three creatures who have no right to know each other, and I shall find out the answer to the enigma if I have to pass the whole night on my feet."

Talking thus to himself, Maxime followed from afar the ill-assorted trio, and arrived almost at the same time under the peristyle. There he took care to conceal himself behind a gathering of talkers, and from his post of observation saw Borisoff separate himself from the little group, push aside one of the doors separating the exterior flight of stairs from the vestibule and beckon to some one. Maxime understood immediately that he was ordering a porter to advance a carriage—a hack to all appearance, for the servants of the boys were not there awaiting their master.

It is vain to set one's good limbs and twenty-five years against a pair of horses, even hired ones, and Maxime understood that not a minute was to be lost in making his arrangements to follow them. It so happened that, just as he darted out, an uncovered victoria was passing the square at slow pace, driving Madame Sergent one beautiful November night,—that in which was a house that had been abandoned six weeks ago by its strange tenants.

"Shall I stop?" inquired the intelligent coachman. "They are unloading yonder, the two gentlemen first and then la particuliere. They are paying; seems they've arrived."

"Go on further," answered Maxime, "only take the other side of the street, and put your horse into a brisk trot."

This manoeuvre was not ill contrived. Just as he reached the rising ground of Rue Joffroy the brunette and her companions entered it on foot, having sent away their hack.

The victoria continued its route, but as soon as it had passed the corner of the street which the trio had just entered, Maxime rose, put his hand on the coachman's shoulder, and said, in a low voice:

"Quick! To the right! Stop near the other side, and do not budge. I return. Here are twenty francs in advance. It is possible I may keep you here all night."

"Good!" sneered the sly coachman. "I understand. You are after la particuliere. This sort of business always amuses me. Have no fear. I was fresh when you took me, and my horse will hold good till morning. And if you have need of me, call me in."

"I don't say no," replied Maxime, as he set foot on the ground, and he ran to gain his ambush on the corner of the street.

He arrived just in time to see the lady ring at the door formerly guarded by the cerberus with the red mustache.

The door opened immediately, and closed behind Madame Sergent and her friends.

Maxime was stupefied, astounded, petrified.

This denouement was the only one he had not contemplated, and the more he reflected the less capable did he feel of explaining it.

But he must act, or, at least, try to penetrate this strange mystery. How was he to go about it. Happy ideas are sometimes born of great perplexities.

"Parbleu! I cannot do better than consult my old acquaintance, the porter opposite. He must have a pretty good recollection of me. I gave him twenty francs every time I talked with him, and this evening will willingly give him forty if he will consent to serve me. I even think he would not refuse me his lodge as an ambushade. Provided my man has not gone to bed."

He looked at his watch, and saw it was half-past ten.

"No," he resumed, "these tenants cannot return so soon. But no time is to be lost."

The street, well lighted by the city gas, was silent and deserted. Not a passer-by, not a sound. Max-

A POLITE INQUIRY.

A few days after a farmer had sold a pig to a neighbor he chanced to pass the neighbor's place, where he saw the little boy sitting on the edge of the pig-pen, watching its new occupant.

"How d'ye do, Johnny?" said he.
"How is your pig to-day?"
"Oh, pretty well, thank you," replied the boy. "How's all your folks?"

and twenty-five years against a pair of horses, even hired ones, and Maxime understood that not a minute was to be lost in making his arrangements to follow them. It so happened that, just as he darted out, an uncovered victoria was passing the square at slow pace, driven by a freebooter in search of prey. He would have preferred a close carriage, but there was no choice, and he jumped into the one that offered, with a few very intelligible words to the coachman. In his character of experienced Parisian, he knew well how to speak to this class in the language that makes them move. Moreover, this coachman was one who took in half a word. He drew up against the side of Rue Halevy, and awaited further orders.

Turning toward the theatre, Maxime saw the brunette of the Rink and the two foreigners get in a large hack with four seats, which turned toward the Chaussee d'Antin. His only object now was to follow this hack which proved easy, as the peaceable beasts which led it travelled at a moderate speed.

"Where are they going? They are leaving the boulevard, consequently the night restaurants; then they do not intend to sup—that is, unless they are going to sup at Borisoff's. Yet, no; they would have taken Rue Scribe. It is true that all roads lead to Rome."

The proverb found this evening its application. Arrived at the cross-street whence might be seen the church of la Trinite, the hack turned to the left and filed along the Boulevard Haussman, which ended in the Boulevard Malesherbes.

"One would swear Borisoff is taking them to his own house," murmured Maxime.

The victoria maintained its distance without difficulty, the coachman, an old stager, humming in a low voice Fahrback's polka.

It was not the first time he had aided a citizen in watching a woman, and he knew that such expeditions were always well paid.

Before the doorway of Saint Augustin the situation began to define itself.

"There is no longer room for doubt," growled Maxime; "they are going to the Rue de Vigny. What are they going to do? To make an end of Carnot—get rid of him? A spy, a valet, and a knave of a woman are capable of combining to murder a man who incommodes them; at least—that idea has never occurred to me, but it is not more inadmissible than all the rest—at least, if they do not all understand each other, and the Lord Robert does not make one of the band. I mean to set my mind at rest, and shall stick close to them till I have cleared all this up."

Unfortunately, it was not long before the problem became still further complicated. Instead of taking the Boulevard de Courcelles for the Borisoff mansion, the hack continued to roll in the direction of the fortifications.

"Can it be that they intend to leave Paris?" he asked.

It did not occur to him that Madame Sergeant imitated the manoeuvre of the hare, who returns to its home after having given a long chase. And when he saw the hack stop at the corner of a certain street, he had much difficulty in believing his eyes. It was the same through which he had conducted my man had not gone to bed."

He looked at his watch, and saw it was half-past ten.

"No," he resumed, "these tenants cannot retire so soon. But no time is to be lost."

The street, well lighted by the city gas, was silent and deserted. Not a passer-by, not a sound. Maxime glided the length of the wall, as he had done before on his first expedition to this quarter, and arrived without encountering a living creature at his wished-for haven.

From this well-chosen site he discerned, in full, Madame Sergeant's mysterious habitation, and ascertained that no light was visible from the windows. All was sombre as on the evening he had escorted her from the Rink. Evidently the receiving rooms did not look on the street.

On the other hand, he observed, with a lively satisfaction, that from a window on the ground-floor of the dwelling confided to the surveillance of the porter he was seeking, shone the unobtrusive light of a lamp.

This curtainless window must be that of the lodge, and looking in he saw the porter, his elbows on a table and spectacles on his nose, reading from the evening's paper, which one of his tenants was, perhaps, awaiting with impatience.

He was alone with a big cat and a featherless parrot.

Maxime, having to enter upon delicate negotiations, could not have been more fortunate. Not being duplicated by a companion whom he would have been compelled to make the confidant of his projects, there remained nothing but to approach the porter frankly and enlist him as an ally.

Unwilling to quit even for a moment his post of observation, he concluded to strike on the window of the lodge. At the sound the porter laid down his paper, turned his head, and seeing the outline of a figure through the panes, went bravely to open it.

"Fear nothing," said Maxime, in a low voice; "I am the person to whom you gave some information last month about the Prussian opposite."

"How, sir, you?" cried the man, "at this hour?"

"Yes; I came to ask you to do me a service. Can you let me in—immediately?"

"With pleasure; and remain as long as you please."

"That is what I was about to ask. There is something new—over there. But do not leave me longer in the street. I don't wish to be seen over yonder."

"I come, sir; I am running," and having closed the window and drawn the cord, M. Bidard went himself to receive his unexpected visitor.

"Quick!" said Maxime, gliding into the alley. "Let us go in; and put out the light, I beg, or hide it in a corner if you can't put it out. And to identify you for disarranging you, here are two louis."

Bidard pocketed them, and thrust the lamp under the table, muttering—

"Monsieur, I thank you all the same, but can assure you that what I do is not from calculation."

"I am sure of it. Now station yourself as sentry with me behind the window, and let us talk."

The man hastened to follow a monsieur who gave princely pourboires, and had ways as mysterious as a hero of romance.

EVERY DAY BRINGS A FRESH PROOF

THAT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS ARE A BOON TO SUFFERING WOMEN.

Mrs. Rousseau Tells How They Cured Her After Three Years of Almost Ceaseless Pain.

Hintonburg, Ont., May 2 (Special).—Every day furnishes fresh proof that the women of Canada can be cured of ailments which have hitherto seemed to be a part of the inheritance of the sex by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. And this place has a living proof in the person of Mrs. William Rousseau, of 37 Merton Street.

"For over three years," Mrs. Rousseau states, "I was very ill. My troubles were painful. I suffered very much with my back. My head ached almost continuously and I scarcely knew what it was to be free from pain. I was very weak and run down. Occasionally my hands would swell up, and this, too, gave me a great deal of annoyance and discomfort. I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and very soon commenced to improve. Three boxes cured me completely."

Nine-tenths of suffering women's troubles start from diseased kidneys. The natural way to cure them is to take away the cause, that is, to cure the kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure diseased kidneys.

"When did the tenants over there return?" asked this munificent stranger.

"Return? Monsieur knows the Prussian left six weeks ago, and nothing has been heard of him, and nothing ever will."

"Either by him or by some other the house is occupied now."

"By rats and mice, then. Everything is shut up, as monsieur may see, and nothing has budged since the Prussian decamped."

"You must be mistaken."

"Oh, no, sir. I pass half the day on the door-step since the weather is fine, and no one has been in the house. I answer for it with my head, and I beg monsieur to believe I set store by my head."

"A woman and two men are there at this moment. I have just seen them go in."

"And the Prussian is one?"

"No; they are foreigners whom I know, and do not resemble the bear. It is not the first time the woman has come here in the night. I escorted her to the door the night before I came to you for information, and on that day I told you the name she gave me—Madame Sergeant."

"I recollect. Monsieur thought she was a cocotte. And monsieur is certain she is within with the gentlemen?"

"Absolutely certain."
"Then that house is the Tour de Nesle," cried the porter; "there must be horrors going on there. Suppose I go for the police."

"No; I have reasons for not having recourse to the police. Besides, what ground should I have? This woman has undoubtedly the right to enter a house of which she carries the key in her pocket, and to take there whoever she will. What

"That's what I said to monsieur. They will begin by sitting down to table, and certainly it will not be to make way with the leavings of the Prussian. But where did they get decent provisions? Not a carriage from Potel or Chabot has been seen to enter Rue Joffroy. Ah! the illuminators are disappearing. They are coming to supper."

(To be continued.)

Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup is agreeable to the taste, and is a certain relief for irritation of the throat that causes hacking coughs. If used according to directions it will break the most persistent cold, and restore the air passages to their normal healthy condition. There is no need to recommend it to those familiar with it, but to those who seek a sure remedy and are in doubt what to use, the advice is—try Bickle's Syrup.

FREAKISH.

A gentleman who had just returned from Africa brought home with him a negro as his servant. The darkey had always been used to hot countries, and had never seen water in its solid form as ice. One morning he came into his master's room, carrying a large piece of ice, and exclaimed:

"See, master, what a large piece of glass I have found."

His master, by way of joke, told him to put it in the oven to dry. Very soon he came back, carrying the partly-melted ice, and saying:

"See, master, this is the queerest glass I ever saw; the more I dry it the wetter it gets."

CURED HIS LAME BACK.

West Fort William, Nov. 7th, 1903.
"I have been troubled with a Lame Back for the past twenty years and have used plasters and ointments without effect. At last I tried Gin Pills, which proved just the thing, and I would highly recommend them to anyone who has a Strained or Lame Back."

of the bowels is an absolute necessity for good health. Unless the waste matter from the food which collects there is got rid of at least once a day, it decays and poisons the whole body, causing biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches. "Monsieur may act as if at home, and nothing can escape him here."

"Has the house another outlet?"

"I don't know of any. There is a garden behind, but it is enclosed and there is no gate on the other side."

"How is the house arranged inside?"

"First there is the ground-floor, with a dining-room and billiard-room; on the first floor a large salon; on the second, two bedrooms; on the other front a small salon on the first floor; on the ground-floor—"

"Look!" interrupted Maxime, "there is a light in the first story."

"True, they are lighting up the large salon; two lamps—and wax candles. See how it is lighting up everywhere, quicker than the Champs-Elysees on illumination days! The dining-room's turn has come now—one light—two lights—ah, the cocotte is going to give a ball and supper! And the larders, where do they come from? See how they pass and repass before the windows. 'Pon my word if a body was superstitious he might believe the devil was making a feast there, for since the house was built nobody has seen the end of a candle burning in it."

"And you declare that for some days past you have seen no one enter?"

"Not a cat. Monsieur may ask all the tenants in the neighborhood, if they hadn't gone to bed they'd be at the windows, and would make such a stir people would collect in the streets."

"It is amazing," thought Maxime, "evidently they have brought a squad of servants in the night to prepare for the reception of the master and his guests. Who has done that and for what purpose?"

"It is my notion the cocotte has brought two rich foreigners to spend the night at play and get their money."

"I don't think play has anything to do with it. You say there is a small salon on the side next the garden?"

"Not so small, and richly furnished. It looks like a lady's boudoir."

"That is where she has taken the two men, while she gave orders to have the apartments for reception made ready."

Luminous Painting of the Japanese Gives Rise to a Story of the Emperor Tai Tsung—Roman Workman Invented a Glass Cup That Would Bend But Not Break—Damascus Sword Blades.

It is said that the art of luminous painting was known to the Japanese so long ago as 976 A.D., in the dynasty of the Emperor Tai Tsung of the Sung dynasty. He had in his possession a picture painted by one Su Ngho that was a spirited affair, being nothing more or less, however, than a picture of an ox that everyday left the picture frame to graze and then returned to the frame to sleep at night. This thing worried the emperor, as it seemed to his mind to be more realistic than was necessary, just a common picture of a common ox, so he made numerous inquiries among his subjects as to why the ox, being only a picture, daily went out to graze.

None of the people, of course, could explain the phenomenon and the emperor finally appealed to a certain wise Buddhist priest, who said that the Japanese painter had known of an ancient secret and applied it to his art in painting the picture. It really was nothing, explained the learned priest, more than that the artist had found some nacreous substance within the flesh of a certain kind of oyster that could be picked up among the rocks when the tide was low. This substance was dried and then ground into color material, and pictures painted with these colors were invisible by day and luminous by night, so the secret was that during the day the figure of the ox was not visible, and it was therefore said that it left the frame to go on grazing.

History relates that during the age of Tiberius a Roman workman who had been banished was allowed to return to Rome, which he did, bringing with him a glass cup—a really wonderful cup, for he dashed it upon the pavement and it was not broken by the fall, although dented, but with a hammer he easily bent it into shape again. It was brilliant, transparent, but not brittle. It is further stated that the Romans were much interested and learned that the man had obtained the cup from the Arabians, who are wonderful chemists. In the books of that long ago time there is a glass mentioned that if supported by its own weight would in a day dwindle down to a fine line and could be curved around the wrist like a bracelet.

The glassblowers of ancient Thebes are known to have been far in advance of the most proficient craftsmen of our day of "progress," some 4,000 years later. They were well acquainted with the art of staining glass, and are known to have produced that article in great profusion and perfection. Rossellini tells of a piece of stained glass known to be 4,000 years old which displayed artistic taste of high order, both in tint and design. In this specimen the color is struck through the vitrified structure, and he mentions other designs struck entirely in pieces from one-half to three-quarters of an inch thick, the color being perfectly incorporated with the structure of the piece and exactly the same on both sides.

The priests of Ptah at Memphis were adepts in the glass worker's art, and not only did they have manufactories for the common crystal varieties but they had learned the vitrifying of the different colors and the imitating of precious stones to perfection. Their imitations of the

The Basking Shark.

The ferocity of sharks is not necessarily in proportion to their size. For example, there is the great basking shark, so called because of its habit of lying motionless at the surface of the water. It often attains a length of nearly forty feet, but its teeth are small comparatively, and it probably never attacks man, depending upon small fishes and crustacea for its diet. Another name for this species is "sail-fish," because of its great back fin, which shows out of the water like a sail when it is basking. Although sluggish ordinarily and easily harpooned, it exhibits great activity and enormous strength when struck, diving immediately to the bottom and requiring a great length of rope to hold it. These basking sharks are caught for their livers off the coast of Iceland, and the oil obtained is used to adulterate cod liver oil.

were adepts in the glass worker's art, and not only did they have manufactories for the common crystal varieties but they had learned the vitrifying of the different colors and the imitating of precious stones to perfection. Their imitations of the amethyst and of the various other colored gems were so like the real article that even now, after they have lain in the sands of the desert from 2,000 to 4,000 years, it takes an expert to tell them from the genuine. It is known also that they used the diamond for cutting and engraving glass, and in the British Museum there is a beautiful piece of stained glass with an engraved emblazonment of the monarch Thothmes III., who lived over 3,400 years ago.
 Proclus, who had a fame greater than Archimedes as a mathematician, is credited with having made a burning glass during the reign of Anastasius Dicomus which was of such remarkable efficiency that at a great distance he set fire to and destroyed the ships of the Mysian and Thracian fleets that had blockaded Byzantium.
 The Damascus blades, those marvels of perfect steel, have never been equalled, and those in use during the crusades 800 years ago are to-day "good as new." In London there is one on exhibition that can be put in a seacrew and bent every way without breaking. The point of this sword can be made to touch the hilt.
 There is on exhibition in the Army Medical Museum at Washington, a specimen of microscopic writing on glass. This writing consists of the words of the Lord's Prayer and occupies a rectangular space measuring 1-294 by 1-441 of an inch, or an area of 1-129654 of a square inch. These lines are about 1-50000 of an inch apart. Now, to get some idea of the minuteness of this writing: There are in the Lord's Prayer 227 letters and if, as here, this number occupies the 1-129654 of an inch there would be room on an entire square inch for 29,432,458 such letters similarly spaced. The entire Bible, Old and New Testaments, contains but 3,569,480 letters, and there would therefore be room enough to write the entire Bible eight times over on one square inch of glass in the same manner as the words of the Lord's Prayer have been written on this specimen. Such a statement staggers the imagination, but the figures are easily verified and are certainly correct.

 Corporal of the Guard—Sentry, port arms! Give up your orders!
 Sentry proceeds to give over his orders until he comes to the hackneyed "in case of fire or any unusual occurrence immediately alarm the guard."

 Sentry—Well, sir, if I were to walk to the far end of my post and turned round and found the sentry box marking time I should call that an unusual occurrence.

 "That's a good start toward the presidency, son," responded wise Mr. Washington. "Now split it into rails."—Pittsburg Post.

The Growth of Seaweed.
 Seaweeds grow surprisingly in their habits of life. Some species grow altogether beneath the water, attaching themselves below the lowest tide level; others frequent heights where they are left dry at every retreating tide, while others yet are found in situations where they are scarcely ever covered by water. Whereas most of them attach themselves to rocks or solid bottom, keeping to the shallows, there are exceptions to the rule, among which the most remarkable is the sargasso or gulf weed, which floats on the surface of the ocean. Immense fields of it are seen by the navigator, extending as far as the eye can reach. It is sometimes so abundant as seriously to interfere with the progress of ships, and it was this which so alarmed the crew of Columbus on his first voyage of discovery.
A Tragic Wedding Ring.
 A tragic story of a forgotten wedding ring is told in the "Lives of the Lindsays." He should have been at church when Collin Lindsay, the young Earl of Balcarrais, was quietly eating his breakfast in nightgown and slippers. Reminded that Maurilla of Nassau was waiting for him at the altar, he hurried to church, but forgot the ring. A friend present gave him one, which he, without looking at, placed on the bride's finger. After the ceremony was over the countess glanced at her hand and beheld a grinning death's head on her ring. She fainted away, and the women made such an impression on her that on recovering she declared she was destined to die within a year, a presentiment that probably brought about its own fulfillment, for in a few months the careless Collin was a widower.

The Old Way of Passing Bills.
 A document found among the Duke of Rutland's papers at Belvoir castle throws a curious light upon the mode of getting private bills through the English house of commons in the days of King Charles II. The case in hand was the divorce bill of John Lord de Roos, an affair that caused a great deal of gossip in its day. One of his lordship's agents wrote in January, 1687: "On Wednesday last I got six and forty of the house of commons to the Dog tavern, in the palace yard at Westminster, when were present Mr. Attorney General and Mr. George Montagu. As soon as they had dined we carried them all to the house of commons, and they passed the bill, as the committee, without any amendments, and ordered it to be reported the next day."

HAVE YOU BEEN STUNG?
 Some people have recently been badly "stung" by getting substitutes for Zam-Buk. When they have asked for a box of Zam-Buk, the dealer has produced some line on which he makes more profit, and talked about "Just as good and cheaper," or "One of my own, and I know what's in it," or "Really, the same thing at half the price," etc., etc. When tested, this cheap substitute has, of course, failed to do anything like what Zam-Buk does, but the buyer has, nevertheless, parted with his money! You will have to get Zam-Buk eventually! Don't waste money on useless substitutes. The name "Zam-Buk" is protected by law. See it on every packet before paying. If your local dealer should be out of stock, write "Zam-Buk, Toronto." We will mail it by return.

GAVE ALL HE HAD.

The Romantic Story of an Old California Miner.

"The finest gentleman I ever knew," said Mark Twain once, "was an old California miner who could barely write his own name. He was a forty-seven, and he and his partner had struck it rich in the early days. The old man had neither chick nor child, and he had worked hard all his life, and when he did get his money he hardly knew what to do with it.

"He did not try to jump into society or to push his way with the 'big fellows' there. He continued to live with the people whom he had associated with all his life, and many an act of kindness was done, many a wandering son and father saved, many a sorrowing woman's burden lightened and her home brightened by an unknown donor, whose identity with the old man was only known to a few.

"It was different with the partner.
He had a wife and two daughters with social aspirations, and after a while lot of pushing and hauling and shoving they landed in society. The expense was too much of a drain on the husband's purse, and he speculated, with the inevitable outcome. He lost his entire fortune and then shot himself. Then it was that the true gentleness of the old man showed itself.
The widow and her daughters had no one to turn to but him, and he did not disappoint them. He saved their home for them when everything else went under the hammer, and he maintained them in all the regal style to which they were accustomed, although he still lived in his old lodgings. He lived long enough to see both of the girls well married and the mother carefully settled in life. Then he died in a charity hospital in San Francisco. He had spent every penny he owned on the family of his partner."

NO WONDER HE DIED.

The Way Charles II. Was Dosed by His Fourteen Doctors.

Charles II. of England lived less than a week after he was attacked by his fatal illness, and it is wonderful that he lived so long. A monograph on "The Last Days of Charles II." gives some extraordinary details of those last days:

"The royal patient had fourteen doctors in attendance. They bled him to the extent of thirty-four ounces; they shaved his hair and applied blistering agents all over his head; they also applied plasters to the soles of his feet, and they dosed him with orange infusion of the metals, white vitriol dissolved in compound peony water, powder of sacred bitter, sirup of buckthorn, rock salt, emetic wine, two-blend pills, bryony compound, powder of white hellebore roots, powder of cowslip flowers, best manna, cream of tartar, barley and licorice, sweet almond kernels, sal ammoniac, antidotal milk water, mallow root, melon seeds, chicken broth, bark of elm, a julep of black cherry water, flowers of lime, lilies of the valley, peony compound, spirit of lavender, prepared pearls and white sugar candy, seena leaves, flowers of camomile, gentian root, nutmeg, ale made without hops, spirit of human skull (commonly employed in convulsive disorders; the purpose was suggestive—viz, to excite horror, as it was to be the skull of a man who had died a violent death), Peruvian bark, sirup of cloves, Raleigh's stronger antidote, Goa stone, Rhine wine and oriental bezoar stone."

BURIED HIS OPPONENT.

"Sunset" Cox Pronounced the Eulogy and Wrote the Epitaph.

Adlai Stevenson in his reminiscences tells some stories of the witty New York congressman, "Sunset" Cox. One relates how Cox got even with a new member who tried to crush him, and another gives Cox's retort to Samuel J. Tilden's effort to win the dyed in the wool Republican state of Vermont in 1876.

A new member from a sparsely settled district entered the house. His avoidpupols was in keeping with the vast territorial area he represented.
As a wit he was without a rival in his section. The admiration of his constituents over the marvelous attainments of the new member scarcely exceeded his own. Only the opportunity was wanting when the star of the gentleman from New York should go down and his own be in the ascendant.
The opportunity at length came. In the great speech made by the new member Mr. Cox was the victim of the hour, the recipient of many compliments much more fervid than kind.
The seven vials of wrath were opened upon him. A vast storehouse of wit, ancient and modern, was literally exhausted for the occasion. Even the diminutive size of the New York member was mentioned in terms of dispar-agement.

The speech caused much merriment in the house during its delivery, and its author, with an air of self satisfaction rarely witnessed even in that body, resumed his seat. Mr. Cox at once took the floor. No attempt will be made to do justice to his speech.
The manner, the tone of voice, which caused an uproar upon the floor and in the galleries, can never find their way to print. Referring to the ill mannered allusion to his size, he said "that his constituents preferred a representative with brains rather than one whose only claims to distinction consisted in an abnormal abdominal development."
In tragic tones he then pronounced a funeral eulogy over his assailant and suggested as a fitting inscription for his tombstone the pathetic words of Byron:

"Tis Greece, but living Greece no more."

Soon after the nomination of Tilden for president Mr. Cox was invited to attend a political meeting at the state capital and address the Democratic

Richardson. Like the cupboard mentioned in the well known nursery rhyme, Sir John's second cabinet proved "bare" of any sensation, the contents being chiefly composed of letters relating to certain long forgotten family quarrels that had not even the merit of being interesting. If some of those authorized to be present at the opening of the third and last receptacle of mystery were dubious about the profit that would accrue by letting the light of day fall upon the contents thereof after sixty years' darkness, one at least, Sir B. W. Richardson, looked forward with unabated interest to that day in 1896 when the last seal would be broken and the mystery solved, but he, alas, died just two days before the ceremony was performed, and the fact that Sir John had played a practical joke upon posterity was duly confirmed by the presence of a collection of perfectly worthless letters and papers.

A COOL RECEPTION.

It Was Not Surprising. Though, In View of the Explanation.

Letters of introduction are not invariably serviceable. For one reason, they may be too frank. Harry Furniss in his "Confessions of a Caricaturist" says that when a brother artist was setting forth on his travels in foreign climes he was provided with a letter of introduction to a certain British consul.

The writer of the letter inclosed it in one to the artist, saying that he would find the consul a most ardent snob, a bumptious, arrogant humbug, a cad to the backbone. Still, he would probably offer some courtesies to any one who had a good social standing and thus compensate the traveler for having to come in contact with such an insufferable vulgarian.

On the return of the artist to England the writer of the letter asked how he had fared with the consul.

"Well, my dear fellow," drawled the artist, "he did not receive me very warmly, and he did not ask me to dinner. In fact, he struck me as being rather cool."

"Well, you do surprise me," rejoined his friend. "He's a cad, as I told you in my letter, but he's very hospitable, and I really can't understand this state of things. You gave him my letter of introduction?"

"Why, I thought so; but, do you know, on my journey home I discovered it in my pocketbook, so I must have handed to him instead your note to me about him."

The explanation was quite adequate.

Nature's Spirit Level.

Nature forestalled the invention of the spirit level. We use nature's spirit level to retain our balance. This device consists of semicircular canals or channels hollowed out in connection with the ear and bones of the head and filled with a fluid lymph. This fluid flows and ebbs in these channels and by so doing informs the brain of the position of the body. If we move the head on one side the fluid flows that way and notifies us that we are far beyond the perpendicular. If it were not for this remarkable spirit level we should never know until we had fallen that the body was tilted to a dangerous angle or that we were losing our balance.

Easy Oysters.

During a discussion on finance in the United States senate one of the speakers traced the history of the various mediums of exchange, their development and changes from the days of barter to the days of gold and silver.

"I call to the attention of the senate," he said in the course of the speech, "that at one time the medium of exchange was oyster shells. Oyster shells were used for money."

"Delightful!" broke in the late Senator Hoar of Massachusetts. "If that system only prevailed now we could order half a dozen oysters on the half shell and pay for them with the shells."—Saturday Evening Post.

Painfully Frank.

The caller didn't look it, but she declared to little Clorinda that she dearly loved children. It may be that she said so because she heard the distant swish of the skirts of Clorinda's mamma; but, whatever the cause, she repeated it urgently. Then, as the small lady with the pet cat made no move to answer her invitation to come and make friends, she asked, "Why is it that you love your kitty better than me, dearie?"

And Clorinda's mamma entered the room with an ill concealed smile as she heard her daughter answer, "Cause she purrs as if she meant it."

Bad Hand Made Him Money.

When Lord Curzon was at Oxford he wrote an abominable hand. One day he penned two letters, one of them to a relative and one to a chum with whom he always discussed the faults of their respective relations, and accidentally put these letters into the wrong envelopes. He was about to write a profound apology to his relative when he received the following note from him: "Can't read a word of your four pages, but guess you want some money, you young rascal." Enclosed was a Bank of England note for a good amount.

Our First Street Car Line.

The first street railroad in America was completed between the city hall, New York, and Fourteenth street, in 1832. The car—the first for service in the streets of any city in the world—consisted of three compartments, each holding ten persons, and seats were provided on top of the car for thirty or more persons. The fare paid varied with the distance, being sixpence from the city hall to Fourteenth street. Boston was the next city to adopt the new system, in 1856, and Philadelphia followed in 1857.

She Was Frank.

Miss Mary Morris, daughter of the late William Morris, poet and craftsman, said at a dinner in New York: "I like the American taste for its frankness. Better be frank, even if wrong. The pretty American girl was by no means hopeless whose comment on first seeing the incomparable glory of the Venus de Medici was, 'I wouldn't be seen dead with ankles like that!'"

Chinese Combing.

Large quantities of what are known as combings are imported from China via Trieste or Hamburg packed in cases wrapped in straw and weighing from 123 to 130 pounds per bale. This Chinese hair is all chemically bleached in a solution of hydrogen peroxide and assorted according to lengths, then dyed colors and shades desired by purchasers. The lengths vary from six to thirty-five inches.

When the scarcity of Democrats in the Green Mountain State is taken into account the significance of Mr. Cox's reply will readily appear. His telegram was to the effect that pressing engagements prevented his attending, but "If the Democracy of Vermont will drop into my library any afternoon about 4 o'clock I will address them with great pleasure."

Hennequin's Infant Tablets

Save Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)
Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she could not live. The Tablets cured her.—Mr. E. R. McBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.
My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—Mrs. JAMES RIDDELL, Barrydale, Ont.

We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and prepay them. If your baby is not well send for trial package. Hennequin Tablets have the letter "H" stamped upon them—this is your guarantee. All dealers, 25c per package, or 5 for $1.00 sent postpaid to any address.

New Amberol Records by Slezak

Leo Slezak, the great tenor, now sings for you in the Edison Phonograph the same famous arias from the Grand Operas that the New York audiences pay $5.00 a seat to hear. Just how great a singer Slezak is, is told in the following remark, quoted from the New York World the morning after a recent appearance of Slezak at the Metropolitan Opera House: "Caruso now has a rival."

Slezak has made ten records for the Edison, comprising the principal tenor songs from the more prominent roles of his repertoire—so that, while the New York opera goer pays $5.00 a seat to hear Slezak in one opera, with the Edison Phonograph and Amberol Records you get Slezak at his best in his ten best roles, including Otello, Lohengrin, Tanhauser, Rhadames in Aida and Rodolfo in La Boheme.

Only on Amberol Records can you get a full length rendering of these great arias—and only on the Edison Phonograph do you get Amberol Records. Hear these great Slezak Records at any Edison dealer's today.

ORRIS ROOT.

How It Is Grown and Gathered on the Hills Near Florence.

Most people know that orris root is one of the chief ingredients of violet powder; many others are well acquainted with the strangely shaped pieces of white root that seem like dried ginger—which give out the delicate and subtle scent of the violet, and perhaps the privileged few know that it is made from the roots of a kind of iris.

"Never have I seen the cultivation of the iris and the preparation of orris root to such perfection as last summer in the Tuscan Apennines, where Vallombrosa lifts its pine covered head," says a writer in The London Queen. "On the sunny side of the mountain lies the whole district of the Val d'Arno, and between Saltino and Pian di Sco the entire neighborhood is given up to the cultivation of vines, olives and iris.

"Indian corn, wheat and millet find a place, but wine, oil and orris root are the three commercial industries. Pergolas of vines stretch along as far as the eye can see—vines with clusters of purple or white grapes, olives laden with green berries and under them and between them little plantations of iris dalmatica.

"The iris, or giuggolo, as it is called in Italy, is planted thinly and allowed to grow for three years, when the roots are dug up and tied in big bundles. These are then prepared. Nearly the whole of the tuberos root is cut off, leaving only a tiny bit with fibers in order that the plant may grow when replanted, as it is at once for another three years of peace.

"The tubers are then thrown into big basins of water, and the whole family of the contadino, or peasant, sitting on the doorstep of their house or under the pergola in the shade of the vines, begin the business of peeling them previous to their being dried in the sun for the market. Everybody

How to Light a Solid Body.

Cadogan Morgan was the first electrician to experiment with electric light in solid bodies. This was in 1785. He first inserted two wires into a stick of wood and caused the spark to pass between them. This had the effect of illuminating the stick a beautiful blood red. An ivory ball, an orange or an apple may be lighted in the same manner. Some experimenters prefer the lemon for this purpose, it being very susceptible to the electric discharge, flashing forth at every spark as a spheroid of brilliant golden light. The wires used for this purpose should be brought within about half an inch of each other inside the lemon.

Saved His Life.

A story is told of an Englishman who had occasion for a doctor while staying in Pekin.

"Sing Loo, greatest doctor," said his servant. "He saved my life once." "Really?" queried the Englishman. "Yes, me terrible awful," was the reply. "Me callee in another doctor. He give me medicine; me velly, velly bad. Me callee in another doctor. He come and give me more medicine, make me velly, velly badder. Me callee in Sing Loo. He no come. He save my life."—Birmingham Post.

The Shah's Dagger.

One of the treasures of the Shah of Persia is a diamond set in one of his scimiters, which renders its possessor invincible. There is also a dagger with the same property, but it is ordained that those who use it should perish by it. It is therefore carefully shut up in a sandalwood box on which is engraved a verse from the Koran.

WORSE THAN OPIUM.

Queer Kind of Smoke Which Starts In Boyhood Days on the Farm.

"Opium smoking isn't in it with potato-stem smoking," states a doctor. "Usually the vice—and there are more victims than you would imagine—starts in boyhood days on the farm, when the youngster of the family steals his father's pipe and hides with it and some matches down behind the garden fence or behind the barn next to the field potatoes. He doesn't dare to take up the straight tobacco, but he tries out some dried potato stem in the pipe.

"The smoke sets, the experimenter into a delicious dreamy state at first, but the heart action accelerates in a minute or two in an effort to throw off the poison through the lungs and skin. The dreamy state quickly disappears, the face gets flushed and the heart action rapidly increases to severe palpitation.

"If the dose has been large the victim feels a wild, fierce elation and impels him to action of any kind. In this state he may do anything, but the stage is reached much more quickly than with alcoholic liquors.

"At this stage the heart action weakens and there is either stupor or syncope, in which the victim of the potato poison lies practically paralyzed and unable to move, while his brain is in an insane whirl. This represents the height of the intoxication, and it is followed by acute depression and melancholia and a slow return of the physical powers.

"The potato stem smoke speedily draws a victim down. He grows pale, is gaunt and emaciated, ends up with violent acute mania, usually with homicidal tendencies.

"I had one case of the kind. A boy of 16 caught the habit trying to find a substitute for tobacco. He only lasted about three years. There wasn't anything that could be done for him.

"This young chap couldn't be restrained or changed from the potato stem craving by any of the usual drugs. He was kept in bed, roped down, during the maniacal stage that he went through. Morphine didn't seem to do any good. The moment he was freed, after recovering somewhat, he would make a rush for the nearest potato vines, trying to get and smoke the stems, which he secreted in many places cunningly hidden."

Drinking Serpent Venom.

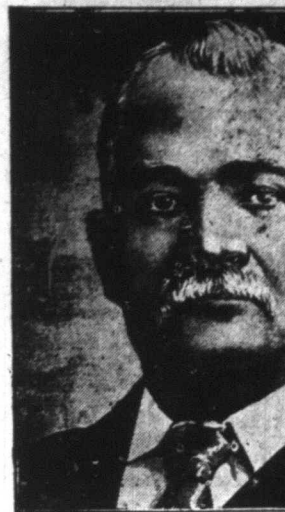

The serpent is said to be protected from its own venom by certain properties in its blood, and it is a curious fact that certain members of South African tribes claimed to possess immunity from serpent bites because they had serpent's blood in their veins. Many writers, again, have stated that natives of the country are in the habit of drinking serpent venom. It appears to produce a certain not unpleasant form of intoxication, and to protect them against serpent bites. And that snake poison can be taken into the system in this way with impunity is one of the results of Prof. Fraser's experiments. He found that a quantity of serpent venom sufficient to kill 1,000 animals if introduced directly into the blood could be introduced into the stomach without injury.

What was the explanation of this strange fact? Prof. Fraser came to the conclusion that the animal's bile was the antidote to the poison. And on mixing the serpent's bile with its venom he found that the latter was deprived of its deadly effects. The same property in a lesser degree was found to exist in the bile of other animals. And the special constituent in bile which possesses the active property has been isolated, and promises to be one of the most powerful antidotes for snake poison yet discovered. And a French experimenter, M. Phisalix, has found that "cholesterin," one of the constituents of bile, is an antidote. Guinea-pigs inoculated with it were found to be immune from snake

"AS CRAZY AS A LOON."

Old Phrase Seemingly Not a Libel on That Eccentric Bird.

"One often hears the expression 'As crazy as a loon,' and yet I wonder," says a writer in St. Nicholas, "how many realize how peculiarly fitting it sometimes is. Of all the birds and animals that have come under my observation I know of none that in any degree approaches the loon for sheer craziness or weirdness.

"Evening seems to be the loons' favorite time for their peculiar behavior. They collect in the middle of a lake, and when they have summoned all of their kind within hearing the ball commences. They raise their bodies half out of water by furiously flapping their wings, at the same time making a most terrific splashing.

"They then propel themselves backward and forward, half swimming, half flying, all the while screaming at the top of their voices. They keep this up from ten to fifteen minutes and seem to get a great deal of satisfaction out of it. In the calm of a summer evening and added a bit by the echoes a half dozen loons can make the fellows in a college cheering section hang their heads for shame.

"The loon is not only crazy acting, but at times is very aggravating. Per-for basins of water, and the whole family of the unfortunate, or peasant, sitting on the doorstep of their house or under the pergola in the shade of the vine. It is the business of picking them previous to their being dried in the sun for the market. Everybody is busy with the small, arch-shaped knives trimming the iris root. In its fresh condition it is sold for about 20 centimes, the iris about 2 cents a pound. But after a few days' exposure to the brilliant Italian sunshine on large wickerwork trays it loses two-thirds of its weight and is sold to the wholesale merchants at 9 cents a pound.

Why Grandma Failed.

Katherine's grandmother generally brought her a piece of candy or a nut when she returned from a party. Once, however, she forgot, and Katherine, never thinking she could be forgotten, asked: "Wasn't there anything loose, grandma?"

faction out of it. In the calm of a summer evening and added a bit by the echoes a half dozen loons came making the fellows in a college cheering section hang their heads for shame. "The loon is not only crazy acting, but at times is very aggravating. Perhaps, for instance, after a hard day—you are sitting by the campfire, quietly smoking and at peace with the whole world. Suddenly there breaks upon your ears the most bloodcurdling scream, followed by heartrending cries. Your first thought is that there is a child being murdered or a woman in distress, and you start to your feet. Then you realize it is only a loon.

"Or perhaps, having turned to you are sleeping the sleep that comes only in the purest of north. Again you start and awake as you hear a long, mournful cry echoing through the forest and you naturally exclaim, 'Wah-oos.' There is a grunt, and the deep voice of your guide comes from the depths of his blankets, 'Nou, n-sten, loon.' In the morning a hunter arises bent on vengeance for his broken repose and resolves to destroy the fiend as he sits mirrored in the lake. Although the modern cartridge rifle gives no warning of the shot, as did the old-fashioned flintlock with its flash in the pan, nevertheless the loon nearly every time seems to know when the bullet is coming and dives just in time to escape. Immediately after the discharge of the rifle the loon is serenely up again, his mocking laughter being but an added irritation. On the whole he seems rather to enjoy the performance.

"As a diver the loon excels, and naturally, for it is his sole means of live blood. Not only is he marvelously quick, but he can remain under water for a seemingly endless time. In swimming under water he uses both wings and feet and can go for several hundred yards in this fashion. The loon, like many other water fowls, sleeps on the water with his head tucked under his wing.

"Several summers ago a friend of mine while camped on Lake Kiamika was out for an early morning paddle. It was just after dawn and very still. Out on the lake he espied a sleeping loon, and by dint of careful paddling he actually succeeded in approaching and capturing him. Proud of his capture, he took the loon ashore and tethered him to a stake. The loon struggled at first, but after awhile seemed to become reconciled. All went well until midnight. Then the loon set up such a hideous outcry and kept it up so persistently that before morning he had earned his freedom."

Mozart and Beethoven.

The stories of how men of genius have had future fame predicted for them in their early youth must generally be taken with a considerable grain of salt. As authentic as most is the account of the first meeting of Mozart with the young Beethoven, which took place on the latter's first visit to Vienna in the year 1787. Mozart, then at the height of his fame, asked him to play, but, thinking his performance a prepared piece, paid little attention to it. Beethoven, seeing this, entreated Mozart to give him a subject, which he did, and the boy, getting excited with the occasion, played so finely that the composer of "Don Giovanni," stepping softly into the next room, said to his friends there: "Pay attention to him. He will make a noise in the world some day or another."—Chamber's Journal.

Does things other Ranges cannot do

The Most Convenient Range in the World

In the Champion Interchangeable you can use coal alone, wood alone, or gas alone. You can use coal or wood and gas at the same time. You cannot do this with any other range. Champion also has a closed top for cooking with natural gas.

There cannot be an explosion in the Champion. You light the burners direct. The oven burner cannot be lighted until the door is open. No other gas range is so absolutely safe.

Ordinary gas ranges use the oven for keeping the dishes warm. The Champion has a warming closet.

Champion

INTERCHANGEABLE GAS, COAL & WOOD Range

You can change the Champion from a gas range to a coal or wood range in three seconds. And while building a coal fire you can use gas under two pot holes and the broiler burner.

When the coal fire is burning you can still use gas on two top burners and broiler burner in oven, which is an invention worth while. Truly the Champion Interchangeable Steel Range does things other ranges cannot do.

The Champion will cost you about the same as a high-grade steel range. It can be supplied with two extra burners on right hand end, or an instantaneous water heater, or a reservoir heated by gas.

The Champion takes the place of two ranges, thus saving room in the kitchen. Considering these facts it is the best range investment in the world.

The demand for the Champion Interchangeable is already very large. There may be a scarcity later on. So we advise you to go to our agent and see this remarkable new range at once.

A booklet explaining the Champion fully will be mailed to you free if you will write to our nearest office.

PAGANINI.

A Genius That Touched the Line Dividing Sanity From Madness.

If ever there was a genius it was Paganini, the violinist, and probably no one has ever approached so near without crossing the border line that divides sanity and madness. The stories of his antics and eccentricities are endless. His up-bringing was atrocious, but it will not explain everything. At sixteen he was a gambler, a rouse and — a genius. Everything seemed to turn to gold under his marvelous fingers. Money poured in upon him like water. Yet he was at one time reduced to the point of selling his fiddle. He had got down to his last 30 francs. He took them to the roulette table, staked the whole sum on one fling and—won.

The violin thus opportunely rescued came into his possession very curiously. When he was a lad, Parsini, the painter, came one day to his father's house and, putting into the lad's hand a priceless Stradivarius and the score of a concerto of great difficulty, said:

"This," indicating the violin, "shall be yours if you play this," indicating the sheet of music, "at sight without a fault."

"You have lost your instrument, sir," said the youthful Nicolo and proceeded to play the concerto

HOW DO YOU JUDGE A DAIRY COW?

A dairy cow is often judged by the scale of points of the breed to which she belongs. Another method is to rate her according to her general appearance and the external indications of milking powers; appearances are sometimes deceitful. Recently a farmer near Orms town, Que. sold five cows at $25 each, saying they were no good as dairy cows. The purchaser found to his great satisfaction that one gave him 10,000 lb. milk, and another 13,000 lb. Sometimes a cow is valued because she is easy to keep, or she is a docile family pet. Coming nearer to the practical test, a farmer may judge his best cow to be the one that daily gives a couple of pails full of milk in June; though she may quickly decrease in flow, the remembrance of that yield sticks in her owner's mind and she is undeservedly ranked too high. Or she may have earned a wide local reputation just by one isolated test for fat very likely higher than normal. On the other hand a cow that gives only a moderate yield but attends strictly to business for a reasonably long milking period will probably prove the most valuable. Again there may be some general idea of production, but totals that are only estimated are generally in excess of the actual yield.

The positive proof of value is certainty of the cow's ability to produce milk and fat economically; the generous minded, unselfish, real dairy cow, independent of strikes and lockouts, works full time, and returns a handsome margin of profit above the computed cost of feed. The one infallible test is a record of the production of each cow for the full period of lactation. Don't average up the herd, ascertain that each cow is a specialist.

CENSUS BULLETIN OF CROPS AND LIVE STOCK.

Ottawa, May 10.—The Census and Statistics Office has issued to-day its May Bulletin on the condition of crops and live stock for Canada.

The reports made at the end of April show that good progress had been made with spring seeding in Ontario and the western provinces, but that in Quebec and the Maritime provinces little more than a beginning had been made. Ontario and Alberta are in the lead with spring wheat and oats, the former with 89.34 per cent of the spring wheat and 74.74 per cent of the oats in the ground, and the latter with 97.50 of the wheat and 73.13 of the oats. Ontario had also 72.94 per cent of the barley seeded, and Alberta only 39.17 per cent. Manitoba and Saskatchewan had nearly equal proportions of the wheatland finished, the former with 90.68 per cent and the latter with 92.60 per cent; but both were slow with oats and barley. British Columbia had a showing of 78.33 for spring wheat sown, of 81.66 for oats and 39.17 for barley.

Ontario and Alberta are the only provinces with a substantial showing of fall wheat, and whilst in the first-named the condition at the end of April was 95.47 per cent, in the second it was only 81.66 per cent. Alberta also showed considerable loss by winter-killing and drouth, the proportion of the area sown being 22.46 per cent as compared with 6.42 per cent in Ontario. In British Columbia the loss by winter-killing was five per cent of the area sown, and the condition at the end of April was 100.

The hay and clover meadows suffered by winter-killing 12.80 per cent in British Columbia and 11.65 per cent in Quebec, but in all other provinces the loss was comparatively slight. The condition of these crops was good in all the provinces, ranging from 81.85 in Quebec to 102 in Prince Edward Is-

Mr. Borden evidently is as fully awake to the chance, slender as it is, that a general election may be sprung soon, as is Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and hence while Sir Wilfrid is preparing his western fences this summer, Mr. Borden will devote his time to strengthening his already excellently looked after Ontario palings. After all, they do not lose many points, these Canadian politicians.

The presentment of the Grand Jury to Mr. Justice Riddell emphasized the need of some means of disarming the foreigners who are mainly responsible for the increase that has taken place in the number of murders in Canada. The Judge's suggestion of searching immigrants at the place of landing may be good as far as it goes, but regulation of the sale of weapons might still be needed.

A Few Bottles of Peruna Restored Me to Health.

Mrs. John Henderson, 2 Overdale Ave., Montreal, Can., writes:

"I was much distressed with neuralgia and was so run down that life was not worth living. I tried a great many remedies, but all to no effect.

"I met a friend of mine, and told her of my ailment. She advised me to try her remedy, Peruna.

"Although I had no faith in Peruna, I took her advice, and am pleased to state that the neuralgia has entirely left me, and have gained so in health that I feel just like my old self again.

"I am enjoying the best of health.

An Argument For Social Frankness.

It is best to be sincere, as a family in an eastern city recently found out. They had been entertaining a distinguished novelist from abroad who was not altogether acquainted with society's way of saying things it does not mean. The time came for her departure, and as the host was handing her to the carriage he said very courteously, "I am sorry you cannot stay longer."

To which came the unlooked for retort, "Oh, but I can!"

There was only one course open. The trunks were taken down, the carriage sent away and to the consternation of her hosts, the lady re-entered the house.

Mrs. Buffers—He asked me to endorse the check, and when I told him I hadn't the ghost of an idea what he meant he said he presumed I hadn't had much experience in endorsing checks.

score of a concerto of great difficulty, said:

"This," indicating the violin, "shall be yours if you play this," indicating the sheet of music, "at sight without a fault."

"You have lost your instrument, sir," said the youthful Nicolo and proceeded to play the concerto through.

Here is a pen picture of the great violinist by one who was present at one of his triumphs:

"He looked," says this eyewitness, "like an indifferently dressed skeleton. His figure was of astonishing gauntness and angularity and his walk shambling and awkward. But his face, lit up by a pair of great, dark, flaming eyes, was of a pallor quite extraordinary, even ghastly, and had a look of almost eagle sharpness, sometimes varied by a sardonic grin or a look of almost demoniacal fury. He came on to the stage limping, having run a nail into his heel. At all times odd looking, his appearance in these circumstances was ludicrous, and there was some tittering among the audience."

"As he stood, he settled himself on one hip at a gaunt angle, and one found oneself wondering how he could hold his violin, much less play it. Just as he began a candle fell on his desk—more laughter. Presently his first string broke—more laughter. But he played the rest of the piece through on three strings, and now the laughter was changed into tumultuous applause, which as the evening wore on became simply frantic."

Verily, great wit is oft to madness near allied.—London Family Herald.

Sailor First, Soldier Now.

One of the most striking examples of a celebrity who changed his mind and his profession is that popular soldier, Gen. Sir John French. Sir John began life in the navy at the age of fourteen, which perhaps accounts for the fact that he was pre-eminently the "handy man" of the South African campaign. Sir John is the most good-natured of Irishmen, as both officers and men under his command can testify. At Strydfontein, for example, he gave up his own—and the only—bed to a weary junior officer, and genially observing, "I don't care where I sleep," rolled himself in his cloak and lay on the floor. On another occasion, going his rounds at midnight, near Johannesburg, he went out of his way to guide two belated guardsmen to their own camp. One would think that Sir John's face and figure must be familiar to everybody by this time. Yet there is a story going at Aldershot to the effect that when he took up his appointment there and dropped in at the schools in mufti to see how things were going, a youthful teacher failed to recognize him. Of course, when the general wrote his name in the visiting book there was a sudden call to attention and a shamefaced apology. Sir John only laughed, and said, "Never mind, 'I'll let you off this time.'"

Useless Study.

Mr. Fond Father reproved his little son for having only 75 per cent. in arithmetic. "Mathematics, my boy," he said, "is a very useful study, and you must try to do better."

"I thought that was only useful for sailors," said the boy.

"Why for sailors?"

"Well, people on land have adding machines, don't they?"

Hair Health

If You Have Scalp or Hair Trouble, Take Advantage of This Offer.

We could not afford to so strongly endorse Rexall "93" Hair Tonic and continue to sell it as we do, if we were not certain that it would do all we claim it will. Should our enthusiasm carry us away, and Rexall "93" Hair Tonic not give entire satisfaction to the users, they would lose faith in us and our statements, and in consequence our business prestige would suffer.

Therefore, when we assure you that if your hair is beginning to unattractively fall out or if you have any scalp trouble Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will promptly eradicate dandruff, stimulate hair growth and prevent premature baldness, you may rest assured that we know what we are talking about.

Out of one hundred test cases Rexall "93" Hair Tonic gave entire satisfaction in ninety-three cases. It has been proved that it will grow hair even on bald heads, when, of course, the baldness had not existed for so long a time that the follicles, which are the roots of the hair, had not become absolutely lifeless.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is vastly different from other similar preparations. We believe that it will do more than any other human agency toward restoring hair growth and hair health. It is not greasy and will not gum the scalp or hair or cause permanent stain. It is as pleasant to use as pure cold water.

Our faith in Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is so strong that we ask you to try it on our positive guarantee that your money will be cheerfully refunded without question or quibble if it does not do as we claim. Certainly we can offer no stronger argument. It comes in two sizes, price 50 cents and $1.00. Remember you can obtain it only at our store, The Rexall Store—T. B. Wallace.

"What is your favorite salutation?" she asked the dilatory youth.

"Eh! Why, I don't know. What's yours?"

The fair girl yawned wearily.

"It would have been good night," she said. "But in about two minutes it will be good morning."

"Good-bye," said the dilatory youth.

The Japanese musical instruments are made mostly of bamboo. They also played upon a pipe or whistle, which was about three feet long and six inches across. This sounded like the hollow roar of a lion. Another was a bundle of tubes of different lengths, which covered the small boy who carried it like a big saddle. A log hewn out with two strings stretched across it served as a drum. A zither of sixteen strings and a mandolin of two completed their outdoor band, while inside one could hear other music made by gongs of wonderfully pure and beautiful tone.

From the Days of Abraham.

Damascus has strong claims to be considered the oldest city in the world. The place remains very much what it was before the days of the patriarch Abraham, an island of verdure set in the Syrian desert, and has martial and sacred associations extending through thirty centuries. According to Josephus, Damascus was founded by Uz, the son of Aram and grandson of Shem. It is first mentioned in Scripture in Genesis xv, 2, in connection with Abraham, whose steward was a native of that place.

Appropriate Verdict.

"Well, that's what I call an appropriate verdict," remarked Jilson the other evening as he threw down his paper.

"What is it?" asked his wife.

"Why," he replied, "you know the defaulting cashier at the bank, who committed suicide when the shortage was discovered?"

"Yes, I remember," said Mrs. Jilson, "but what of the verdict?"

"This morning," answered Jilson, "the coroner's jury brought in a verdict of death from exposure."

LIFE OF GEORGE FIFTH

Sailor Prince Who Went All
Through the Navy

The new King, George Frederick Ernest Albert, to be known in history as George V., does not look unlike his illustrious father, and his medium stature, with reddish brown hair, beard, and mustache, blue eyes, and kindly face, will be easily recalled by citizens of Canada by reason of his tour through this country shortly after the accession of Edward to the throne.

He is today, in his forty-fifth year, having been born at Marlborough House on June 3, 1865. He is the second son of Victoria, and became Prince of Wales on November 9, 1901 by reason of the death of his elder brother, the late Prince Albert Victor Christian Edward, who passed away at Sandringham on January 14th 1892, in his twenty-eighth year.

At the age of 12 years he entered the navy as a cadet, along with his elder brother, and spent two years on the Britannia, the school ship at Dartmouth. Two years later the two princes joined the Bacchante, under the command of the Earl of Chawilliam and went on a cruise to the West Indies, where they practically underwent all the hardships which the ordinary cadet was subject to. Christmas of that year was spent in the Barbadoes, the young Princes going ashore for the day. A short while later they laid the foundation for a sailors' home at Bermuda.

BECOMES A MIDDY.

The Bacchante being later attached to the Channel fleet, Prince George was in January, 1889, promoted to be midshipman. He crossed the equator, visited the Canaries, the Falklands, Simons Bay, Montevideo, and Australia, where he remained several months. Then he went to China, and returning to the Mediterranean, by Singapore and the Suez Canal, completed his tour by a trip through Palestine. He spent six months with his brother in Lausanne, Switzerland.

In 1884 Prince George was made a sub-lieutenant, and joined H. M. S. Canada on the North American station. The following year, in October, he became a full lieutenant. He was attached successively to various ships, and served with the Dreadnought and the Albatross, flagship of the Mediterranean squadron, of which his uncle, the Duke of Edinburgh, was commander in chief.

HIS FIRST COMMAND.

In 1889 he received his first command, that of torpedo boat No. 79, during the naval manoeuvres. While in charge of this vessel he rendered valuable assistance to another vessel which was in distress. On May 6, 1890, he was placed in charge of the first class gunboat liff. In July, 1895, he presided at the sixth International Geographical Congress, held at the Imperial Institute. In 1899 he succeeded the Duke of Argyll as president of the Royal Humane Society.

MARRIAGE OF THE NEW KING.

The marriage between the King and the Queen Consort, the Princess Mary of Teck, took place on July 6, 1901, the King being then 25 years of age. The ceremony was performed in the Royal Chapel, and was attended by all the Royal family, and by the Czarowitz of Russia and the King and Queen of Denmark.

As a result of that union five sons and one daughter have been born: Prince Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David, born June 23, 1894, the present heir presumptive to the throne; Prince Albert Frederick Arthur George, born December 14, 1895; Prince Henry William Frederick Albert, born March 31, 1900; Prince George Edward Alexander Edmund, born December 23, 1902; and Prince John Charles Francis, born July 12, 1905; and Princess Victoria Alexandra Alice Mary, born April 25, 1897.

THE TITLES HE HAS.

The principal titles conferred upon him are those of hon. LL.D. from Cambridge in 1894, from the Welsh University in 1902, from London University in 1903, and from Glasgow in 1907. Hon. D. C. L. from Oxford in 1897; and Melbourne, Sydney, Adelaide, McGill, Royal and Toronto Universities, and Queen's College, Kingston, Ont., in 1901. He was made Hon. Mus. D. by the University of Wales in 1902, and by London University in 1903. He became a Bencher of Lincoln's Inn in 1892, and Treasurer in 1903. In 1901 he was installed Chancellor of the Cape University, and of the Welsh University the next year.

He was a Personal Naval Aide-de-Camp to her Majesty Queen Victoria and was Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, and Constable of Dover Castle in 1905-07. He was appointed Personal Naval Aide-de-Camp to his Majesty King Edward VII. in 1901.

By an Act of Parliament in 1901 he was granted an annuity of £20,000 revenue received from the Duchy of Cornwall.

THEIR GLOBE TOUR.

In 1907 the Prince and Princess made a journey to Ireland, where they were very cordially received. Their memorable visit to the British colonies in the four corners of the earth, as Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York, was begun in the steamship Ophir in March, 1904. The itinerary was through the Me-

CROWNING OF GEORGE V.

WILL BE MOST GORGEOUS SIGHT IN THE WORLD.

Kings of England Solemnly Presented to Subjects in Westminster Abbey.

George the Fifth became King of England when the breath left his father's body. He has yet to be crowned, and the coronation of a king is the most stupendous spectacle the old world affords.

The coronation of George V. will be months in preparation. When all is arranged the final programme will be submitted to the King in order that he may set his formal seal of approval upon the arrangements.

The Kings of England are crowned in Westminster Abbey. Guests at the ceremony are permitted to look into the great nave of the building; the peers and peeresses will find the transepts; the choir and instrumentalists will occupy a gallery at the east end of the nave. Bishops in their robes will be ranged at each side of what is termed "the theatre," the actual dais on which the Sovereign and his Consort are to be throned. Members of the royal family will occupy the box just above the south side of the altar.

By old custom, the shouts of the Westminster scholars will herald the entrance of the King and Queen, and the choir will render the hymn, "I Was Glad When They Said Unto Me."

The coronation procession, the most gorgeous sight of the old world, will sweep through the whole length of the Abbey, from the west door to the Quire, where their Majesties will kneel in private devotion.

PROCLAIM THE KING.

When they rise, the solemnity will begin with the recognition—that is to say, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Chamberlain and Garter King-at-Arms will formally present "King George the Fifth, the undoubted King of this realm." This is done by turning to each of the four corners of the theatre, the Sovereign also turning his face toward those successively addressed. The regalia will then be handed to the Archbishop, whose duty it is to pass the different articles to the Dean of St. George's to place on the altar. The swords are excepted from this ceremony. Then follow the abbreviated Litany and communion service and the short sermon from the Bishop of London. The King, thus far uncovered, here assumes his cap of crimson velvet, turned up with ermine.

TAKES SOLEMN OATH.

Then follow the taking of the oaths, the singing of the ancient "Veni Creator Spiritu," one of the most ancient prayers handed down from the first ages of Christianity, and a prayer, while reciting which the Primate lays his hand on the ampulla, or vessel filled with oil, standing on the altar.

The King here removes his robe and cap of state, seats himself in the chair near the altar, while four Knights of the Garter hold over him a pall of silk or cloth of gold. The Dean of Westminster takes the ampulla and spoon from the altar, and pouring oil into the spoon, hands it to the Archbishop of Canterbury. The Archbishop anoints the Sovereign in the form of the cross on the head and on both hands, saying "Be thou anointed with holy oil as kings, priests and prophets were anointed." At this time Handel's Coronation Anthem is rendered.

CROWN COMES LAST.

As anointed, the King kneels down, while the Archbishop recites a prayer, and the Dean of Westminster invests him with the "sacramentals." Each of the royal ornaments, robes, spurs, sword, ring, orb and sceptres, is then in due order delivered to his Majesty, the crown coming last. This the Archbishop takes up and lays down again on the altar, offering a prayer for the Sovereign about to be invested. King George will seat himself in the historic chair, placed in front of the altar, and Archbishop Temple will place the crown on his head, the trumpeters will blow out a fanfare, and the guns at the Tower and in the park will fire a salute.

dering the naval manoeuvres. While in charge of this vessel he rendered valuable assistance to another vessel which was in distress. On May 6, 1890, he was placed in charge of the first-class gunboat Thetis, and in it he spent a year on the North American station, visiting Canada and the West Indies. In 1890 he was designated by Queen Victoria to open the Industrial Exhibition of Jamaica, W. I. In 1891, on his return to England, he was promoted to the post of Commander. His latest command was H. M. S. Crescent, in which during 1898 he visited many of the seaport towns of England and Ireland. He was made captain in 1893, Rear-Admiral in 1901, Vice-Admiral in 1903, and Admiral in 1907. He was gazetted a General in the army in 1902.

He was created Duke of York, Earl of Inverness and Baron Kilmarney in 1892. The death of the Duke of Clarence from pneumonia in that year left him heir-apparent to the Throne. He had himself barely recovered from an attack of typhoid, which nearly cost him his life, when he was made Duke of Cornwall and York, was begun in the steamship Ophir in March, 1901. The itinerary was through the Mediterranean and the Suez Canal to India, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, St. Vincent, W. I., thence to Nova Scotia, and through Canada to the Pacific Ocean and back, arriving in England on the 1st of November, 1901.

THE NEW KING'S COUSINS.

King George V. is nearly related to several of the continental sovereigns. He is a nephew of King George of Greece and of King Frederick VIII. of Denmark; first cousin of Emperor William, of the Czar and the Czarina, of Queen Victoria of Spain, of the Crown Princess of Greece, of the reigning Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, of the Crown Princess of Roumania, of the Crown-Princess of Sweden. He is also related to King Manuel of Portugal, King Albert of the Belgians, and Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria.

The Glasgow Chief Constable in a report issued recently comments upon the remarkable increase of sobriety in the city. Apprehensions for drunkenness last year totalled 15,167, a decrease of considerably over 1,000. While lack of money has no doubt contributed to increased sobriety, the Chief Constable states that the growth of temperance has been a great factor. A great deal of money has been spent on amusements, which was just as available for spending in drink. Compared with two years ago the apprehension for drunkenness showed a decrease of nearly 7,000.

KING GEORGE V.

EXCITING HOME-COMINGS

WEIRD WELCOMES FOR HONEYMOONERS.

Ducking a Bridegroom in the Village Pond Experience With a Taxi-Cab.

A village near the town of Northwich was recently the scene of an exciting episode. Owing to the extensive brine pumping that goes on in the neighborhood there had been a serious subsidence of the earth, and several houses had been more or less dismantled. A honeymoon couple returning home were much relieved to find that their little house, though close to the scene of the accident, had not apparently suffered from the subsidence. Hardly, however, had they entered its doors than an ominous creaking was heard, and their happy home-coming ended in a hurried flight. It was only after hours of hard work by willing helpers that their belongings were rescued from the ruined home, says London Tit-bits.

An extraordinary occurrence was not long ago reported in a Yorkshire village. A young girl, a great favorite with all the villagers, had recently been married, and the runner had got about that she had been ill-used by her husband while they were on their honeymoon. On their return the entire village turned out to meet them at the station, and in view of the terrified wife proceeded to duck the young man in the nearest pond—a lesson which it is to be hoped he profited by.

PELTING THE BRIDE.

A somewhat similar case occurred near Manchester recently. A young lady had aroused the ire of her friends by jilting her lover, a struggling young clerk, and accepting the attentions of a well-to-do tradesman. On the wedding morning the bride was attacked by a score of excited females, who tore her veil off and pelted her with mud. The young couple, however, were not deficient in courage, and faced the music as best they could. On their return from the honeymoon they underwent a similar ordeal, and for weeks after they were almost prisoners in their new house. Until the excitement had worn itself out. The discarded lover, he it said to his credit, took no part whatever in the proceedings and was among the first to offer his sympathy.

COMING HOME IN A TAXI.

Perhaps one of the most tragic home-comings on record was recently reported in one of our large manufacturing towns. A young couple, owing to the late arrival of their train, engaged a taxi to finish their journey home. It soon became apparent from the erratic movements of the car that something was wrong with the steering gear, and to his horror the driver found himself unable to pull up. Madly the car dashed on until it was opposite the new home of the young people, when it took a sudden turn and swerved violently towards the footpath. In another moment the garden wall had collapsed and finally, with a rending crash, the car came to rest half-way through the front-post window. All the occupants were thrown out and seriously injured, and at first the life of the young wife was despaired of. The full extent of the tragedy, however, was not realized until the dead body of the bride's mother was found near the wrecked car. She had evidently come to the house to bid them welcome, and had paid for her kindness with her life.

WARNED BY A DREAM.

A couple in the Midlands not long ago had a weird experience of the value of a dream. On the morning of their departure the young wife told her husband that for three nights running she had dreamt that the journey home must not be made on the day arranged. At first he was sceptical, but at length, on her earnest protestations, he agreed to postpone their return. Judge of their consternation when they learned next day that their new home had been burned to the ground during the night. The climax, however, was not reached until a fortnight later, when it was conclusively proved that the fire had been the work of a former lover who had given way to drink, and who in a frenzy of jealousy had endeavored thus to revenge himself on his fortunate rival.

the the to- sed. aded it is the on pted dlow som- ser- don. here lvet,

This is the climax of the scene, to be followed by the crowning of the Queen by the Archbishop of York. The Queen is anointed—on the head only—and invested with the ring, endowed with the sceptre, the ivory rod and the dove, and after this is done, the peeresses may assume their coronets.

The King and Queen then offer their oblations, and the communion service will be proceeded with.

PARIS MORGUE DOOMED.

The Gruesome Building to be Torn Down.

One of the best known "sights" of Paris is doomed. One had almost said the most famous "sight" of the world, for the Paris Morgue is known the world over. It is controlled by the Departmental Council of the Seine, and at the last meeting of the year this body decided to pull down the present shabby, squat little building and replace it, on another site in the neighborhood, with a mortuary of more modern type.

There are a very few visitors to Paris who can boast that they never hunted out the morgue. It lies behind the Cathedral of Notre Dame, and in it are exposed the bodies of all unknown persons who have perished in the river or met with some other sudden or unexplained death. Unless the bodies are previously claimed, they are placed in a refrigerator and are afterwards exposed, frozen, on the marble slabs of the "salle d'exposition," which is kept at a temperature of 25 degrees Fahr. Those who are seeking lost relatives or friends may go to the morgue and examine the bodies through a glass partition, and identification is helped by the unfortunate person's clothing, which is hung up over each body.

Of recent years over seven hundred bodies have been brought to the morgue every year, and in their frozen state, they have been kept, if necessary, for three months.

The recently, of course, the morgue is not a "sight," and the general public are not supposed to go there, but people whose tastes lie in this direction can easily say they are seeking for missing friends.

ODD PIPES OF ESKIMOS.

Many Bear Carvings Representing the Four Seasons.

The pipes used by the Eskimos are quite different from those of any other North American race, and in the shape of the bowl more resemble the opium pipes used by the Chinese than anything else, says Forest and Stream. The old pipes were very small in the amount of tobacco that they would hold, for in former days tobacco was extremely scarce and in its use was most carefully husbanded.

There was, therefore, a wide flaring margin to the pipe to catch any grains of tobacco that might be spilled in filling it; then there was a hollow which would hold a pinch of tobacco half as large as an ordinary pen and a rather wide hole passing down through the base of the bowl which fitted into the pipe stem. The bowl of the pipe was of ivory, stone, brass or copper.

The pipe then was curved and had a mouthpiece. It is said that the small hole running down through the base of the bowl and into the pipe stem was usually plugged with caribou hair to save any grains of tobacco that might otherwise have passed down through this aperture and so be lost. The smoking of such a pipe would not last long, and we may presume that a very few draws would exhaust it. The smoke was, of course, taken into the lungs.

The Eskimos are known to be extremely skillful in the representation of scenes and objects, while the Indians of Queen Charlotte's Sound and generally all the natives of the Northwest coast of America are famous for their carving in wood and in a black slate. Handsomely carved Eskimo pipes of walrus ivory from Northwestern Alaska have on each side of the pipe, that is to say, on four more or less long, flat surfaces, scenes from the daily life of the Eskimo.

Of these the two sides on the right hand of the pipe as it is held in position for smoking appear to represent the period of cold weather, later autumn, winter and early spring, while those on the left hand side of the pipe represent the summer life of the Eskimo.

THE NEW QUEEN MARY

Possesses Exceptional Qualities of Mind and Heart.

The new Queen Mary is the person who has to be reckoned with in the next reign. She has been preparing herself for the position in the same way that a student might read for law or medicine. She has made a study of royal statecraft and knows down to the tiniest detail exactly her powers and possibilities and those of her husband.

DEVOTED TO DUTY.

Most persons wonder at the extraordinary change in the new Queen since her marriage. From being a gay, frolicsome girl, the life and soul of every entertainment, she turned into a grave, almost gloomy woman, silently going her way, solemnly devoted to her duty. She fails to excite sympathy, admiration or imagination, despite the possession of exceptional qualities of mind and heart. But for her possession of a bevy of handsome children she would be almost unpopular.

THE PEACEMAKER.

She always was remarkable for sound sense. At home in her girlhood at White Lodge she was known as "the peacemaker." Much of her youth was passed in Florence, where the Teck family retired when their fortunes were wrecked, and she is highly artistic. She is splendidly educated, speaking four languages—French, German and Italian, as well as her own—with accuracy and fluency. She sings excellently, is a fine pianist and reads voraciously not only novels but serious books.

She is proud of her striking likeness to her great-grandmother, Queen Charlotte, and buys every picture of her that comes into the market. A woman collector outbid her for one of them at the Duke of Cambridge's sale and refused to sell it even at a premium. The resemblance, though strong, does not flatter the new Queen.

GENEROUS TO BROTHERS.

She is very generous to her brothers, the Princes Teck, who are chronically hard-up. She is keenly interested in politics and never loses an opportunity of discussing it with leaders of either party when she happens to meet them. She is not a success as a royal representative abroad owing to her formal, undemonstrative manner. "Once she was surprised by an unusually enthusiastic reception in an Australian town and asked the mayor what might be the reasons," he, no courtier, replied: "Simply because you are the mother of six children."

TASTES ARE DOMESTIC.

Her greatest friends are Lady Eva Dugdale, the Duchess of Portland, the Duchess of Sutherland, Countess Shaftesbury and Viscountess Chelsea, now married to Sir Hedworth Lubbock. Thoughtful in comparative poverty, she shows small appreciation of her present luxury. All her tastes are domestic, all her pleasures mental. She will be Britain's ruler.

MONARCHS' LAST WORDS

HOW MONARCHS OF THE WORLD PASS AWAY.

Deathbeds of Preceding Kings of England—Crowds Saw

George IV.

"No, I shall go on; I shall work to the end." Words that will be chronicled in the archives of England as the last utterance of a great and good sovereign, a man who had played the game. Edward the Seventh of his name, the descendant of a long line of mighty monarchs has passed.

Death is a solemn thing, especially when the head of a great empire is the one on whom its cold hand falls. But prince and pauper await alike the inevitable hour which levels all distinctions. History tells how preceding sovereigns have met the last dread enemy.

WHEN DEATH CAME.

King James V. of Scotland—It came with a lass and it will go with one. (Alluding to word brought to working dresses were seen peering through the crowd or even passing the barriers; while the screams of the females and the rude and indecent jokes of the blackguard gave the whole scene more the appearance of some crowd hastening to a rare show than to the chamber of death.

WILLIAM'S END

Different indeed were the conditions attending the death of his successor, King William IV. In 1837. For hours his devoted Queen had stayed by his bedside doing her utmost to soothe his sufferings. Then, when the end approached the Archbishop of Canterbury, whose name the dying monarch had been heard to utter several times, came to administer the sacrament.

"Thy will be done," came the reply from the King's lips. And then looking at the Archbishop, in faint tones: "Believe me, I am a religious man."

These were his last coherent words. "In less than an hour," says Fitzgibbon, "his Majesty expired, without a struggle and without a groan, the Queen kneeling at his bedside, and still affectionately holding his hand, the comfortable warmth of which soothed her unwilling to believe the sad

QUEEN VICTORIA MARY.

TOURISTS STREW MONEY

LONDON GETS HER SHARE
FROM AMERICANS.

Millions Spent for Sight-seeing in Europe—Much British Money Spent, Too.

It is estimated that at least 25,000 Americans invade England during the summer months, in vacation for which the West End shopkeepers are deeply thankful. Before the days of the American invasion the months of July, August and September were the prime months for trade. Now all this is changed, and the army of Americans spend in London alone about a million and a half sterling. While hotels and boarding houses get the lion's share of Americans' gold, there are other businesses which benefit largely. These are principally jewellers, sellers of antique and curios, drapers, dress-makers and tailors. West End tailors and dress-makers are especially grateful to those visitors, who keep them busy during what used to be the slackest season of the year.

POCKETS $25,000,000.

While estimates of the amounts spent by tourists must of necessity be largely guesswork, good authorities place the total left behind in Europe every year by American visitors at between $25,000,000 and $150,000,000, of which the United Kingdom altogether pockets $25,000,000. But if American tourists spend a great deal of money in England, it must not be forgotten that a vast amount of British money in the like manner goes abroad. Switzerland is a country which lives so largely on her scenery that she keeps a fairly accurate record of her visitors and what they leave behind them. In an average year she has just half a million tourists, of whom ninety thousand are British, and the amount of money which this army of sightseers leaves in the hands of hotel-keepers, shopkeepers, railway companies and guides is set at $22,000,000.

THE RIVIERA

also collects a good deal of cash from British holiday-makers. Some years ago the Paris Figaro published interesting statistics based upon a careful estimate of the number of persons who spend part of winter in the South of France, and upon the average duration of their stay. Without quoting these at length it is sufficient to say that the total number was placed at 270,000, of whom one-third was English speaking, and that the holidays of the latter, the British and Americans, that is, cost them on an average $250 a head. If the British contingent is placed at 60,000, then here are $15,000,000 of British money spent each year on holiday-making in the South of France. Queen Victoria, quietly as she lived, always spent about $7,000 on her annual visit to the Riviera.

LONG SERVICE RECORD.

Eleven Employees Average Fifty Years with Same Firm.

In the firm of Messrs. Heal & Son, upholsterers, of Tottenham Court Road, London, England, there are eleven employees whose periods of service average nearly fifty years.

These eleven employees are still working in different departments. Some are upholsterers and upholsteresses; some are in the bedding department, and two are carmen.

"This must be a record in the annals of any firm, I should think," said Mr. Heal. "Five of these employees can show an average service of forty-six years; six of over fifty. They are all hale and hearty, and the two carmen are still driving." This should be an eloquent testimony to the healthy nature of the upholstering trade.

"Our firm is now in its one hundredth year of existence. It was founded in a small house in Rathbone place, and probably numbered less than a dozen all told."

FIRST HATPIN FINE.

At Chicago recently a woman's hatpin pierced a man's face. A detective arrested the woman, who was very indignant when fined $1 and costs. The police kept the 15-inch hatpin, calling it a "young sword." This is the first arrest under the new Chicago law forbidding pins to protrude more than half an inch beyond the hat.

which levels all distinctions. History tells how preceding sovereigns have met the last dread enemy.

WHEN DEATH CAME.

King James V. of Scotland.—It came with a lass and it will go with one. (Alluding to word brought to him that his wife had borne a daughter, heiress to the throne, and to the fact of the crown having come to his family by the daughter of King Robert Bruce.)

Charles V.—Ay, Jesus.

Charles I.—Remember. (Suggested to refer to a command to his son to forgive his enemies and murderers.)

Charles II.—Don't let poor Nelly starve. (Referring to Nell Gwynn.)

William III.—Can this last long!

Cromwell.—It is not my design to drink or sleep, but my design is to make what haste I can to be gone.

Napoleon.—Mon Dieu—La Nation Francaise—Tete d'armee!

Richard I.—Youth, I forgive you. (To Bertrand de Gournon, whose arrow killed him.)

Alexander I. of Russia.—You must be tired, Elizabeth. (To his wife, who had been watching long at his bedside.)

Maximilian.—Poor Carlotta!

Louis XVIII.—A King should die standing.

Louis XV.—Why do you weep? Do you think I should live forever? I thought dying would have been more difficult.

Louis XVI.—Frenchmen, I die careless of the crimes imputed to me. Pray God my blood fall not on France. If so—and the knife fell.

Queen Elizabeth.—All my possessions for a moment of time.

Richard III.—Treason, treason!

Charles IX. of France.—Nurse, what murder, what blood! Oh, I have done wrong. God pardon me!

Frederick the Great.—We are all over the hill. We shall go better now. (After a fit of coughing.)

Louise of Prussia.—I am a Queen, but have not power to move my arms.

Louis XIII. of France.—There come to me thoughts that torment me.

Marie Louise, Empress of France.—I will not sleep; I wish to meet death wide awake.

Marie Antoinette.—Farewell, my children, forever. I go to your father.

Napoleon III.—Were you at Sedan? (To his physician.)

Leopold II. of Belgium.—The long, long journey is at hand. I am suffering.

HOW GEORGE IV. DIED.

"Oh, God, I am dying. This is death," gasped George IV. as he half sat, half lay, in the chair to which he had been lifted from his bed when the final spasm seized him.

In the meantime, says Huish in his memoirs, the Bishop of Winchester and all the principal members of the royal household, with pages in attendance, were called in, and in their presence, without the slightest indication of suffering, his Majesty expired.

VIEWED BY THE CROWD.

After the body had been laid in state, the iron gates of the palace were thrown open and everybody was admitted, indiscriminately, according to the historian, "the chimney sweep and the bricklayer in words. "In less than an hour," says Fitzgerald, "his Majesty expired, without a struggle and without a groan, the Queen kneeling at his bedside, and still affectionately holding his hand, the comfortable warmth of which rendered her unwilling to believe the sad reality."

PRINCESS "PAT'S" JEWELS.

Appeared at Dinner Ablaze With Diamonds.

Princess Patricia of Connaught and her elder sister, the crown princess of Sweden, used as young girls to be fond of collecting precious stones from all parts of the world, and many of their friends contributed to their collection, notably the Princess of Wales, on her return from her long colonial tour. Thus the two royal sisters got together many gems both rich and rare, and these no doubt are a pleasure to them both now-a-days. They are evidently so to Princess Patricia for one day when she was staying at a country house she asked her hostess whether she would like to see all her jewels, and as no guests were expected to join the party at dinner, she offered to wear them that evening. Princess Patricia thought it would be "such fun," and her hostess being pleased at the idea, she by and by came down to dinner dressed in a simple-looking white frock, but fairly ablaze with diamonds and other jewels.

VOICES GOING UP.

Noise and Chatter of Streets Cause of High Pitch.

There are evidences that the high pitched voices supposed to be characteristic of America are becoming equally characteristic of London. A retired colonel, who has just returned to London after an absence of thirty years, declares that the Englishman's voice has changed from a deep, heavy tone to a shrill, piping one. Men who are hale and hearty, deep chested and bearded, charged with authority and carrying enormous responsibilities, surprise him by talking in high, rasping tones which do not in the least match their appearance.

He attributes the gradual change in voice to the present noise and chatter of London streets, the roar of underground and tube trains and traces it to the law of evolution, or mankind adapting itself to its environment. He admits that perhaps his ear is particularly keen as he has been living among the people of the mountains and of the plains in both India and Africa, where the male voice is always deep and resonant.

LONDON ORGAN GRINDERS.

One pound a day is said to be the most that an organ-grinder ever takes, while, with some exceptions, 5s. is about the least, so that a London organ-grinder may be regarded as a fairly prosperous man. An organ can be hired from the makers for 1s. 6d. a day, while the price of a new organ is £25. The cost of setting an organ to new tunes is about £4, and, since novelty is essential, this is a frequent source of expense.

KING EDWARD'S FUNERAL

Seven Reigning Sovereigns Will Ride in the Cortege.

A despatch from London says: The London Times on Thursday editorially says:—"King Edward's funeral promises to surpass in solemn splendor all former functions in our annals, or, indeed, in the annals of any other amongst the great monarchies of Europe. Seven reigning Sovereigns, headed by the German Emperor, will ride behind King George as he follows his father's coffin from Westminster through the streets of the capital, and each then in personally taking part in the mourning for King Edward will have the satisfaction of knowing that he is doing an act as grateful to the feelings of his subjects as to his own. With them will be the representative of the mighty nation whose kinship with ourselves makes their sympathy with our sorrows, as with our joys, exceptionally dear and valuable to us."

McLACHLIN TO HANG JULY 13

Takes the Sentence Bravely and Has Nothing to Say.

A despatch from Whitty says: After a trial lasting for three whole days, Archie McLaughlin was convicted late Thursday afternoon of the murder of his wife and two children at Uxbridge on October 22d last, and sentenced to be hanged on July 13 at the jail here. When the jury filed into their seats and announced their decision, the prisoner, who had throughout the trial maintained a studied demeanor of indifference, seemed to shrink in his seat in the dock. He recovered his composure, however, in an instant, and when asked by Justice Teetzel to stand and receive his sentence, his face betrayed but little of the struggle going on within. The jury was polled by counsel for defence.

The scene in the crowded courtroom was dramatic in the extreme. As the word "guilty" fell from the lips of the foreman of the jury a sudden hush fell upon the assembly, contrasting strangely with the air of levity which had prevailed during the progress of the trial. Up in the gallery, crowded by women of all ages, one little girl was seen to lean over a companion and laugh. The spell was broken and an audible sigh went up from the straining crowd in the room. The convicted man made no response to the usual question by the Judge as to whether he had anything to say before sentence was pronounced, and his counsel, Mr. W. A. Henderson of Toronto, addressed a few words to the Bench in his stead. The prisoner received his sentence bravely.

WILL USE OLD SUPPLY.

Head of King George on Coins and Stamps.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The head of King George will not appear on the coins or postage stamps of Canada before the end of the year. The likeness of Edward the Peacemaker will continue on the currency and stamps of Canada for another six months at least. In the case of the postage stamps any design may be used, but it is the custom to have the Monarch's head on the two-cent stamp, which is the one most in use. The department has a six-months' supply on hand, and these will be used up while dies are being prepared for the new issue of George V. stamps. Changing the design of metal currency is also a matter of time. Designs have to be prepared and approved in both Canada and Great Britain. Where the head of the King appears on a coin his special approval of the portrait has to be obtained. The Finance Department has for some time been looking into the question of designs for the new gold coinage of Canada, and on these the head of King

COMET'S TAIL LONGER.

Has Grown From Five to Ten Degrees in Length.

A despatch from Paris says: Astronomers in France are making observations on Halley's comet that are attracting the greatest interest. Maurice Hamy of the Paris Observatory reports that the length of the tail has increased from five to ten degrees in three days. Professor Deslandres of the University of Dijon finds a reappearance in the spectroscopic of cyanogen, the poisonous gas which was observed in January and February, but which disappeared in March. In his report he says that the hypothesis that the gas is liable to affect the terrestrial atmosphere, would not be at all absurd. On the other hand, Camille Flammarion thinks that the tail of the comet is simply an optical phenomenon produced by the flight through ether, similar to the wake of a ship at sea. Mr. Marchand maintains that the comet shows important variations from its important orbit, which presage unexpected surprises.

HEALTH

ASTHMA.

Among all physical ills asthma is perhaps the most irritating. It is hard to endure, and terrible to observe. Its victims die a thousand deaths as far as suffering is concerned, and yet are denied the dignity of having a fatal disease, for it is one of the heartless axioms of experience that the asthmatic sufferer is quite as likely to die of old age as of his disease. It has been said that asthma is not a disease, but a state of body, and if its victims are able to extract any comfort from the knowledge that it is nervous in its origin, they are entitled to that alleviation.

Any one looking on for the first time at a well-pronounced asthmatic seizure is convinced that he is watching a death scene, and no wonder, so terrifying are the symptoms. The patient fights piteously for breath, sometimes crouching for hours in one position, pallid, bathed in perspiration, and apparently in the final stages of suffocation; but curiously enough, with all the distress, the patient does not seem to feel any real alarm as to the outcome.

The attack may pass off either rapidly or gradually, in many cases leaving no apparent after-effect except a sense of great fatigue.

Asthma being a disease with a nervous origin, it follows that there are as many theories about it and remedies for it as there are sufferers from it. With some persons the attacks are apparently a certain outcome of eating a certain kind of food, or breathing a certain kind of air, or reaching a certain day and month of the year. Many asthmatics claim the power of cheating their enemy up to a certain point by moving to some other locality when the tragic date draws near—the asthmatics living in the valleys may pass in transit their fellow sufferers who habitually live on the hills.

Those who trace their attacks to digestive disturbances learn to avoid the starchy foods, or the fat foods, or whatever food it is that upsets them. Some cannot live near a stable; others cannot be near a certain shrub or flower. Indeed, the specialties of these unfortunate people are without number.

The asthmatic, however, has two great sources of comfort. One is the reasonable hope of reaching a good old age; the other is the fact that great help is to be found for him in a strictly hygienic mode of living. The better air he breathes, both day and night, the simpler his diet, and the more wisely ordered his exercise, the fewer will be the number of his attacks.—Youth's Companion.

SICK ROOM HINTS.

Keeping the patient's feet warm will prevent headaches.—
Oil all locks, and soap window cords to make them work easily, and thus save any undue noise.
Hot sand, well rubbed and brushed off, will clean boards in a sick room where scrubbing is impossible.
If the patient objects to the medicine staining his or her teeth, a approval of the portrait has to be obtained. The Finance Department has for some time been looking into the question of designs for the new gold coinage of Canada, and on these the head of King George will appear, but the first of January will probably be the date of their inauguration.

SUICIDE OF TWO BELGIANS.

Jumped From the C. N. R. Bridge at Winnipeg.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Victor Divaldere and Isador Venteinoot, both from the same village in Belgium, both in love with the same girl in the old land, thrown together repeatedly by strange freaks of fate in their four years' work in Manitoba, planned and carried out a death pact two weeks ago. Each was unwilling that the other should have the girl, who was willing to marry the one that would send for her. They decided to solve the problem by jumping to death in the Red River from the C. N. R. bridge. Both lived in St. Boniface, and they met at the bridge on the night of Wednesday, May 4. Wednesday Divaldere's body was found in shallow water close to the bridge, and at the same time Venteinoot's body was found floating at Middlechurch, eighteen miles down the river.

MORE EARTHQUAKES.

People are Fleeing From San Jose in Alarm.

A despatch from San Jose, Costa Rica, says: Heavy earthquakes were felt on Wednesday. Thousands of persons are leaving the city in alarm. A series of severe shocks was experienced on Tuesday. While fear has seized a great part of the population, the authorities continue resolutely at work among the ruins of Cartago. Many living persons have been released from the debris and some of these will survive. In most instances identification of the dead is impossible. The dead are being buried as rapidly as possible at the direction of the health inspectors. Dynamite is being used to lower the walls that are still standing.

EXPLOSION IN ENGLISH MINE

A Hundred and Thirty-Seven Lives Lost at Whitehaven.

A despatch from Manchester says: One hundred and thirty-seven miners lost their lives on Thursday in an explosion in the Wellington coal mine at Whitehaven. Rescue parties succeeded in saving four men, but fire has broken out in the workings, leaving practically no hope for those who are still entombed. Rescue work was stopped by the collapse of the roof.

A curious fact is that a colliery warning was published in many of the newspapers in the mining districts of the kingdom on Wednesday, in the wake of a ship at sea. Mr. Marchand maintains that the comet shows important variations from its important orbit, which presage unexpected surprises.

THEY BLAME THE COMET.

For the Wretched Weather Prevailing in France.

A despatch from Paris says: The abominable weather continues. In the northern half of France the temperature on Thursday seemed by at times, yet at other times it was comparatively mild. Cold, dismal showers came at intervals, and the wind shifted capriciously, attaining a high speed, which lasted, however, only for brief periods. Reports from various parts of France show that the common people believe pretty generally that the approach of the comet is the cause of the remarkable atmospheric disturbances. There is as yet, however, no open excitement among them, notwithstanding that all the newspapers are speculating upon the question as to whether the comet's poisonous tail will destroy animal life on the earth.

RAIN BADLY NEEDED.

The Canadian Pacific Railway's Crop Reports.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Reports from the agents of the Canadian Pacific Railway, received at the local office on Wednesday, indicate that rain is needed generally through the west. On the Lacombe branch there were several good showers during the week. The weather is cool with showers on the Mowbray branch, and there were showers at Pilot Mound. At Saskatoon the weather is warm and the land dry. Kemnay and Fleming report wheat up two inches in places, at Waskada up two inches, at Shoal Lake and Binsearth up one inch. Similar reports come from numerous points. At a number of stations conditions are reported as quite favorable, although the weather continues dry.

day, to the effect that unusual barometric conditions rendered fire-damp explosions extremely probable and that all underground workers ought therefore to be on the alert. The barometer reached its highest reading in the Whitehaven district.

The colliery is owned by the Earl of Lonsdale, and its workings extend four or five miles out under the sea. The spot where the 85 hewers and some 50 odd shiftmen were working at the time of the explosion is about three miles from the shaft exit.

Hogs, $9.25 f.o.b. to $9.50 fed and watered in Toronto.

BANKS AS ROAD BUILDERS

Time and time again in the last two years information has come from the Canadian West indicating that the Chartered Canadian Banks are playing no small part in the development of our Western territory.

Repeatedly we have heard of the Banks going into new Districts with the first settlers—opening up and fostering business connections which have resulted in the rapid growth of the community.

Two of the latest instances of this have been shown in the establishment of Branches of the Traders Bank at Fort George, B. C., and Stewart, B. C. Fort George is half way between Prince Rupert and Edmonton on the projected line of the Grand Trunk Pacific. It is attracting attention on account of its favorable location, and present indications would point to its being one of the large cities of Northern British Columbia. Stewart, B. C., is within two miles of Portland City, the place in British Columbia where the recent wonderful Silver strike was made.

The latter town is attracting people from the Western Coast States in large numbers, and a small rush of prospectors into the district is now under way.

Prisoners in northern Ontario jails may build colonization roads.

cards to make them work easily, and thus save any undue noise.

Hot sand, well-rubbed and brushed off, will clean boards in a sick room where scrubbing is impossible.

If the patient objects to the medicine staining his or her teeth, a good plan is to take it through a straw.

Feather beds should be banished from the sick room. They are unnatural and have a weakening effect on the muscles.

When the sick room is being ventilated, a screen should be passed in front of the window to prevent the danger of a draught.

If hot-water bottles are not procurable, the next best substitute is a brick. Heat it well in the oven and then wrap it round with flannel.

People in general are not aware of the how essential it is to the health and happiness of the patient that there should be a free admission of light into the sick room.

A sick person's hair should never be allowed to become tangled. Braid the hair, in the case of a woman, in one or two plaits and arrange as attractively as possible.

FOUR INDIANS BURNED.

Children Die Immediately, but Parents Lingered for Days.

A despatch from Prince Albert, Sask., says: Four Indians were fatally burned in a camp fifteen miles south of Kinistino last week. The fatality reveals one of the most shocking cases of physical suffering recorded in northern Saskatchewan. Two children, aged sixteen and six, died immediately, but the father and mother, though frightfully burned, lived from Sunday till Thursday without medical assistance. Though the father's feet and hands were burned off when he reached Kinistino, he called for the Indian agent, and instructed him to divide his pack or furs among his creditors in town.

ROSS IS REPRIEVED.

Hanging Will Not Take Place on King's Funeral Day.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The death of King Edward has given a few days' more life to Walter Ross, a young Englishman under sentence of death at North Bay for the murder of his chum, named Parkinson, in the wilds of northern Ontario last fall. The execution was originally fixed for Friday, May 20, but the fact that that will be the funeral day of Edward VII. renders it impossible for an execution to take place on such a day. Consequently Ross will get several days' more life than he expected, the Cabinet having on Thursday advised a respite under the special circumstances of the case.

A HEAVY FINE.

C. A. Holden Convicted of Keeping Gambling House.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: C. A. Holden, keeper of the Moose Club, a gambling joint, was on Wednesday morning convicted of keeping a gambling house and fined the limit, $500, and given a scathing setting out by Magistrate Daly. Holden has cleaned up a small fortune in the past two years and always got credit for having political protection.

35 CONVICTS BURNED.

Lost Their Lives in Fire Started by One of Their Number.

A despatch from Centerville, Alabama, says: Thirty-six negro convicts lost their lives early on Monday when the stockade of the Red Feather Coal Company at Lucille mines, Bibb county, about fifteen miles north of Centerville, was destroyed by fire set by one of the prisoners in an effort to gain his freedom. Thirty-five of the convicts were burned to death, and another was fatally shot by guards while trying to escape. Among those burned was the negro who started the blaze. The fire spread rapidly throughout the structure, which on account of the extreme dryness of the material was quickly consumed, and it was with much difficulty that the unharmed convicts in the stockade were prevented from eluding the guards. All of the convicts at Lucille mines are State prisoners, leased to the Red Feather Coal Company for work in the mines. It is reported that all were negroes.

O'NEIL'S MILLS BLOWN UP.

Explosion at Kenilworth Causes Serious Loss.

A despatch from Arthur says:

A serious explosion occurred at noon on Monday at Kenilworth, a small village about six miles from here in which O'Neil's planing mill, shingle mill and chopping mill were totally destroyed. The cause of the explosion is thought to have been a defective boiler, but this cannot be confirmed, as it was blown to atoms. No one was in the mill at the time of the explosion, so fortunately there was no loss of life. The only close call was to a man driving by in a buggy. His hind wheels were smashed by flying timber, while the road behind was littered with wreckage.

Thirty seconds later and he would likely have been seriously injured, if not killed. The loss will be about twenty thousand dollars.

FRIDAY, MAY 20, A HOLIDAY.

To be Observed as One of General Mourning for La'e King.

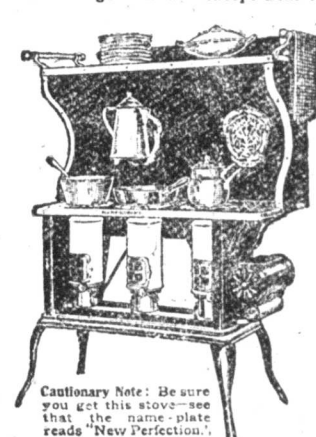

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Cabinet on Thursday authorized a proclamation declaring Friday, May 20, a general holiday at a day of general mourning for Edward VII. It will be a bank holiday and all business will be suspended.

AN UP-TO-DATE STOVE

Do you realize there is no longer any reason why you should use a coal range? Oil is cheaper than coal; it is lighter and easier to handle, and gives an intense heat. Provided you have the right stove, oil is more economical, cleaner and less trouble. Have you seen the

New Perfection Oil Cook-stove

The accompanying illustration gives you only a rough idea of its appearance. You really can't appreciate it until you either use it yourself, or talk to someone who has used it. It does everything that a coal range will do—except heat the room. The New Perfection Oil Cook-

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads 'New Perfection.'

Stove will do anything, from heating a kettle of water to cooking a course dinner, but it won't heat a room. It doesn't "smell," it doesn't smoke. It can't get out of order. Light it and it is ready. Turn it down and it is out. Only a woman who knows the trouble of carrying coal and cooking in a hot kitchen can appreciate what it means to have a clean, perfect stove that will cook anything, boil, bake or roast, and yet won't heat the kitchen. How is it done? The flame is controlled in turquoise-blue enamel chimneys, and directed against the bottom of pot, pan, kettle or oven, and only there. The flame operates exactly where it is needed—and nowhere else. With this stove your kitchen is cool.

The nickel finish with the bright blue of the chimneys makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2- and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

Martin-Senour Paint

100% Pure, Preserves

It feeds the hungry open pores of the wood with pure linseed oil, lead and zinc-making the surface absolutely impervious to climatic changes.

It seals wood from dampness-prevents it from splitting, cracking, from sun and frost, blistering heat and blighting dust, which help the processes of decay and ruin. Good pure paint buys more than 100 cents worth of insurance against the ravages of time.

The ingredients of a pure paint are well known. In the main they are Carbonate of Lead, Oxide of Zinc pure Colors, well ground by specially adapted machinery, and thinned with pure linseed oil and pure turpentine dryer.

Canadian Appreciation

Langham Hotel, London.

Gentlemen, I wish to express my appreciation of the 38 h.p. Daimler which you have delivered to me. Before shipping the car to Canada I made a three weeks' trial of it, covering some 1,200 miles. The car ran perfectly, and I never had the slightest trouble of any kind, and I think it quite lives up to the many claims you make for it. The silence, smoothness of running, and power of acceleration on hills, is really remarkable.

My petrol consumption was 16 miles to the gallon, including a great deal of driving in traffic. The tyres show no appreciable signs of wear, and I think it will prove light on tyres. I am really delighted with the car. Yours sincerely,

District Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Napanee District of the Methodist church was held in Trinity church on Tuesday and Wednesday, 17 and 18th, the chairman of the District, Rev. W. H. Emley, presiding.

Very marked progress was reported from most circuits and a healthy condition in the domestic missions of Arden, Mountain Grove, Pleyna, Vennacher. The Rev. Marquis Sexsmith was appointed representative of the District on the stationing committee, and Rev. J. Copeland, Alternate. The Layman's meeting elected 18 members of the annual conference and 4 alternates. A motion was carried to the effect that Bath be made a young man's circuit under the superintendency of the Chairman of the District.

Rev. Martin J. Bates was recommended for a superannuated relation. The Rev. W. D. C. Boyce, D. D. was elected Journal secretary.

The report of the Sunday school Secretary was very encouraging.

Special prayer was offered for the King, the Queen Dowager and the royal house in bereavement. The next district meeting is to be held in Newburgh.

Beautiful pictures of the town hall and post office may be secured from either P. O. Berkley or T. P. Cooke, photographers, who succeeded in securing excellent pictures of these buildings. They will make lovely souvenirs.

The Morven rural mail delivery went into effect on Monday. The boxes for the rural mail service between Napanee and Adolphustown are at the post office and will shortly be delivered. There will be about sixty boxes on this latter route.

The visit of the Belleville Salvation Army band on Saturday evening and all day Sunday, will provide a treat for the people of Napanee. The band is composed of nineteen pieces and a concert will be given in the Army hall Saturday evening, when an admission of ten cents will be charged. Services of song all day Sunday.

Amongst the mural decorations of the town we notice an artistic design in the western window of the Madole Hardware store. It consists of a motto on a large black background with a picture of our late King Edward VII and Queen Alexandra, divided by a ribbon of purple, an angelic figure holding the bays above the head of the King and the words "Edward VII. He did his people lasting good." Beneath the inscription George V and a commanding picture of His Majesty with the words "God Save the King." Underneath the draping was arranged in telescopic fashion, with black and purple drapery and the whole flanked at either side with bayoneted rifles reversed. The members of the staff are to be congratulated on their loyal and patriotic device so appropriately arranged.

Kingston Whig—On Thursday of last week Mrs. Perry, widow of the late Henry Perry, Napanee, died at her home on Queen street, after but two days' illness. On Wednesday she was threatened with pneumonia, a nurse was secured and on Thursday noon she suddenly expired. The deceased lady was a daughter of the late W. H. Clark, postmaster of Clark's Mills, Lennox county, and was a quiet devoted and Christian lady. She and her sister, Mrs. Davidson McDonald, widow of a Methodist Japanese missionary, who died suddenly in Toronto some years ago, have been living together here and the grief of the sister is very great. They were devotedly attached to each other, Mrs. Perry having lived for years with Mrs. McDonald in Japan. The deceased was a member of Queen Street Methodist church. She is survived by her sister here and a brother, Dr. W. H. Clark, of San Francisco. The remains were taken to Napanee on Saturday morning for interment. The late Mrs. Perry was a niece of Mrs. Sydney Warner, Napanee.

Picton always provided a splendid day's sport on Victoria Day, May 24th, and this year she will outshine all previous efforts, and the Directors of the Prince Edward Agricultural Society are putting on a program that will delight the hearts of old and young. The horse races will consist of a named race, purse $100.00; 3 minute class, purse $200.00; 2 20 class, purse $200.00; free for all, purse $200.00. Another big attraction will be the exhibition of Champion Hackney ponies. These ponies were late prize winners at the Toronto Horse Show and are owned by Chas. Hilmot, of Belleville, and B. R. Hepburn, of Picton. They will be driven single, Tandem, Double, under saddle over jumps. A thrilling and sensational feature of the afternoon's proceedings will be two grand balloon ascensions, with parachute drops. This alone will be worth the full price of admission. Last, but not least, will be the opening of the Prince Edward County Baseball League, when the first struggle for the Championship Silver Cup, donated by Dr. Currie, M. P. will take place, the competing teams being Bloomfield vs. Picton. Music will be furnished by the Napanee Citizens' Band. Picton always sends a bumper crowd to our Dominion Day celebration, let us return the compliment by crowding the Canadian Order of Forester excursion to Picton on their date, May 24th.

Uncle Tom's Cabin

There has never been so lavish and adequate a production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" as that which Mr. Martin will offer amusement lovers at Brisco opera house, Friday, May 27th. The scenes which are large enough to fill the most spacious stage could not easily be improved. Those representing the Ohio River in winter, the rocky pass in which George Harris protects his family, the St. Claire plantation, the levee at New Orleans, the cotton fields in full bloom, and the "Celestial City" are all most notable effects. Each picture the reality as closely as paint and canvas will permit and the stage perspective is so deep that the effect is exceptionally pleasing. The company is also worthy of the environment. Frank Lee, the eminent minstrel star, offers an excellent study of Uncle Tom. Band concerts at noon and 7.00 p. m.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations.

ANY person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section along side his homestead. Price, $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry including the time required to earn homestead patent and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $500.00.

Annual Meeting.

The third annual meeting of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society was held in Historical Hall, Library Building at 8 p. m. on Friday evening, May 13th. When the President called the meeting to order, the hall was filled to its capacity. The first business was the reading of the Treasurer's annual report by Mr. U. J. Flach. This report shows a small surplus of cash on hand. The President then read his annual report which gave a short resume of the work done during the year. He spoke particularly of the additions to the collections, the public meetings held, the new display cases and the publication of Volume 1 of the "Records and Papers." The election of the Officers for the year was then held. On motion of Messrs. Gibbard and Begart the officers for the last year were unanimously elected for the year to come. Both of these gentlemen gave short addresses on the work which the Society has accomplished and were very laudatory in speaking of its influence for good. After the business session President Warner introduced Prof. George M. Wrong of the University of Toronto who delivered an able lecture on "A French Canadian Village." Prof. Wrong handled his subject in masterly style. He told of the origin of the French habitant, his modes of life, his devotion to his church and of his general prosperity, concluding with regard to the ultimate future of the Frenchman in Canada. Outside of the strictly historical value of the lecture it was certainly a great privilege to hear Prof. Wrong's English. His command of the English language is perfect and his word pictures were beautiful. After the President had thanked the lecturer for his goodness in coming to Napanee the meetings closed with the audience singing, "God Save the King."
